

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

While this revised edition of "Cataloging for small libraries" is much larger than the previous one, it is not changed in outline or principle except in one or two minor particulars. It is by no means exhaustive; it is merely expanded and brought out in detail under each point taken up with a view to enabling the librarian of the small library to gain a more complete and more specific grasp of the subject. The many questions that have come to the author from various sources during the past ten years, and her conviction that even small libraries would better conform to system and method, have made her feel it not only expedient but necessary to be more explicit in her suggestions and directions. Anyone, in any calling, business, or profession, is the better for knowing more than she needs. Excess knowledge may be safely stored away to be called upon in emergencies, and the feeling of its possession stimulates worthy self-confidence on the part of its owner.

During the past ten years the author has lectured on the subject of cataloging before many an audience of trained as well as untrained, experienced as well as inexperienced librarians of small libraries, students preparing for such work, trustees of small libraries, and others. The questions asked at such gatherings prove conclusively that the small library does not by any means presuppose a collection of simple books, as is too often taken for granted. If that were so, the simple directions given in the first edition of this work would need no amplification. Experience, however, has shown otherwise, and even trained librarians find themselves timidly doubtful at times in deciding a point, because lack of practice, experience and precedent are wanting to inspire the necessary confidence. Therefore, though this treatise is not intended to be at all dogmatic, I have attempted in this book to outline very fully, but in simple language, with not too embarrassing a number of illustrative examples, the best methods of treating various problems in cataloging, the complex as well as the simple ones, for the librarian of the small library who is ambitious to have her library a well cataloged one in as systematic, useful, yet economical a way as possible.

CATALOGING FOR SMALL LIBRARIES

CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION: ACCESSION RECORD; SHELF LIST RECORD

Before beginning with my subject proper, cataloging, let me lead up to it by giving a brief resumé of the two other records, the Accessions Record and the Shelf List Record. These in their way are almost as necessary to a library, though not to its readers, as is the Catalog, and one of them in addition to the catalog is considered indispensable to its successful administration by almost every up-to-date library in the country to-day.

The Accessions Record, ordinarily kept in an accession book, which can be purchased of the Library Bureau in standardized form, is a numerical and chronological one. Each volume as it is added to the library is entered in the accession book and receives a number called the accession number. The number of the last volume entered indicates approximately the total number of volumes in the library to date. The exact total can only be ascertained by subtracting from this the number of volumes lost, missing, or discarded. Entries in the accession book may be very brief — the author's surname only, as it appears on the title page of the book, a brief title, the source from whence the book came (e.g., the agent of whom purchased, the name of the donor if a gift, etc.), and the cost, the amount paid for it by the library, being sufficient. The last two mentioned items are practically the only ones for which the accession book or record is ever consulted. Many libraries in recent years have experimented in dispensing with the accession book entirely, transferring the two most necessary items to the shelf list record. For a system of branch libraries, because of the many copies added to its collections by purchase and otherwise at different times, varying in edition, in source and in cost, it would not be feasible to do this unless the source and cost could be transferred to some record other than the shelf list (the book order record or bills, for example), or unless it were felt that such items could be dispensed with altogether. For independent libraries, however, all libraries, that is, not part of a system of branches, I would recommend this practice, though an accession number might still be assigned to each volume in the library. This has been tried, with satisfactory results, in a large library of my acquaintance. The accession number in each case can be assigned without much expenditure of time or labor by the use of an automatic numbering stamp, which would not only result in clearly stamped numbers but would dispense with the necessity of keeping track of the last number used.

The accession number is useful mainly in identifying various copies of the same book, but is not an absolute necessity even for this, as other devices may be used. The accession record is a survival of the beginnings of library work in this country, and librarians have simply gone on using it without question because it always had been used. Twenty-five years ago it was considered almost indispensable. And it was—much more than it is to-day. It was the record which contained a full description of each volume in the library—a more itemized description than I have just indicated—and which, because of its accuracy and completeness, was accepted by the insurance companies as a sufficient guarantee of a library's stock. It was sometimes the only record a library could boast. Before the time of library schools and the standardized methods they introduced, the existence of a library did not necessarily presuppose a shelf list and a catalog, and even if the latter existed it was not so complete as the dictionary catalog of to-day. To-day we are beginning to ask ourselves (and one another), "Why do we do thus and so?" "What should we lose if we stopped doing it?" and more particularly, since time means money, "Can we do without it—without detriment to the library's usefulness?" The answer to the last question should determine the decision, presupposing we can answer it aright.

The Shelf List Record (or the class list record as it was once called) is a record kept on cards in class order; i.e., the cards are arranged by classes (according to whatever system of classification is used in the library) and alphabetically by author under each class, in the exact order in which the books are arranged on the shelves. Each card should contain the Class and Book number, the Accession number, the Author's name (in form and fullness as it appears on the main catalog card, except that the initials only of forenames need be given, and a pseudonymous name following the real name of an author in parentheses, or a real name a pseudonymous one, may be omitted), the title of the book, given more briefly, the number of volumes (if more than one), and the date of publication or imprint date as it is technically known, to which may be added the copyright date (or inclusive copyright dates) if it differs more than one year from the imprint date. Or the copyright date may be given if there is no imprint date. If there is more than one copy of the book in the library it should be indicated either by the accession number (each copy having its own individual accession number), or if no accession number is used, by some other method, such as "cop.1," "cop.2." The shelf list record is an indispensable tool for taking inventory at stated intervals. In fact, in some old libraries I have recently heard the shelf list spoken of as "the inventory," showing plainly for what it was originally intended. It prevents duplication of book numbers. It also enables a librarian to know (or find out) at any time how many and what books the library has in a certain class, and likewise in which classes it is weak and in which strong. It gives the history of every book in the library from the beginning, with the number of copies of each, and its final disposition. It answers the library's needs as a partial subject catalog, enabling one to discover readily the numbers and titles of all books in any one class, though not always all material possessed by the library on the subject represented by a given class number. That is to say, a book can occupy but one space on the shelves, consequently but one class number may be assigned it. Therefore it remains for the catalog to bring out fully and completely all material, not strictly belonging to this class, by means of its subject headings and cross references.

This brings me to the most useful record in any library, the one record indispensable to the public, if it would know thoroughly and without loss of time in searching, the full resources of the library on any given topic or by any given author, the record important alike to public and librarian: the catalog.

The kind of catalog generally found in public libraries to-day is the Dictionary Card Catalog, because it is the one most readily understood and consulted. The methods of dictionary cataloging are thoroughly taught in our Library Schools because it is the most useful, particularly for a popular library. It is the Dictionary Card Catalog (the catalog in which all the entries, whether author, title, or subject, etc., are arranged in one alphabet like a dictionary or a cyclopedia) which I shall make the subject of the following text.

CHAPTER II

GENERAL PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICAL APPLICATION

Let me enter upon my subject by saying as impressively as I can, "Do not make a fetish of cataloging." There comes a time in the experience of almost every young librarian when she thinks of cataloging not as a means to an end, but as something of the utmost importance in itself. This is a great mistake. Your catalog is useful only as it displays the resources of your library; therefore be practical in the making of it. Do not be tempted from the straight path — the path of common sense — by alluring vistas on either side. Put yourself in the position of the reader who is to use the catalog and you will seldom go astray. Shut yourself away from the "madding crowd" of library borrowers, and catalog merely to please yourself, and the result may be a very chef d'œuvre, technically perfect; but not a good working tool, the tool that is to help both you and your public to make use of the full resources of your library. This central thought for the cataloger, namely, the ideal of making a perfect tool, I shall develop by quoting a paper I prepared some years ago on the "Needs of a small library":

"The three essentials which I should call indispensable for a small library even more than for a large one are, first, an interested and capable governing board; second, a first-class librarian; and third, a first-class catalog. As a rule the first insures the second, and the second, the third."

"Even the best librarian does not know and cannot remember everything, hence the need of a first-class catalog. Any librarian may have some specialist come in temporarily and compile a card catalog for her, but only a good librarian will know how to keep it up and will have the desire to do so. The smaller the library, the more complete and analytic that catalog should be. All the resources of the library, to the smallest and seemingly most trifling, should be made available to the public. Every book should be analyzed, sifted, that is, for every subject treated therein, that it may be brought to the reader's notice by a suitable heading in the catalog; for though the library may contain but a chapter on a certain subject, the fact should be made evident. In short, the less material you have, the more you want to exploit that little and make every bit of it available for the use of your public. If, as in a large library, you have from 20 to 100 or more entire books bearing on a given subject, you can afford to ignore all small mention of that subject which may be found incorporated in other works. A great deal has been said about a good librarian being better than the best catalog. That is not so. In the first place, the best librarian, though she may have a marvelous, never-yet-met-with-in-my-experience memory, cannot know or remember the contents of every work in the library. If she is asked for a list of titles on, let us suppose, William Dean Howells, will she be able to say, without consulting her catalog, that articles about him may be found in Bolton's "Famous American authors," p. 258-285, and in Rideing's "Boyhood of living authors," p. 14-85 respectively? If she is asked for some book on Constantinople, and her library contains nothing but the mention made of it in Bayard Taylor's "Lands of the Saracen," p. 324-354, will she find the information ready on the tip of her tongue? Will she not rather be apt to say, "We have no book on that subject," unless her catalog is such as will supply her with that fact?"

"In the second place, the librarian is not always in the library and cannot be in all parts of it at the same time. In the third place, the librarian may become ill or even die or get married before she has had time to pass on her wonderful memory to her assistant or her successor."

It has been said that the open shelf system minimizes the use of the card catalog by the public. Alas, that it should be so! The books on the shelves do not indicate the resources of the library in a circulating system. Many books come in only to go out again almost immediately, particularly when the supply is inadequate. The devouring fiction reader is not tempted away from his favorite hunting ground as of yore. The librarian, however, can and should always make the best possible use of her catalog, and so help and influence her constituency. The entries on the catalog cards should be full enough to be clear without being too long. All imprint may be dispensed with, with the exception of the number of volumes and the date of publication or copyright date (or both), and, in some special cases perhaps, for historical and scientific works, information regarding the edition, illustrations, portraits, or maps. (In the Brooklyn Public Library we now supply even less than this on the cards in the branches, and find that they meet every requirement of the borrowers in our various branches.) Too much information is apt to confuse the public. Subject entries should be carefully thought out and made, with cross references, whenever there is the least indication of their usefulness.

It will be found of the greatest possible benefit to the library if from the very beginning the fiction is annotated, shortly and concisely, and the necessary subject cards made. Many people (women in particular) prefer to read history and books treating other serious subjects in novel form; and it is certainly better that they should read it thus than that they should not read it at all. The subject headings in such cases should be followed by the words in fiction in parentheses; e.g., United States. History. Civil war (in fiction); Woman suffrage (in fiction); Hypnotism (in fiction), etc.

The books of every library, no matter how small it may be, should be classified, preferably according to some well-known system, like the Dewey Decimal classification, for example. It always saves time, confusion and money in the long run, if a library is started on a proper basis. You may think you can do without this and that until some future time, but you will find that it pays in the end to get and to do the needful things in the very beginning. The time comes but too quickly when an imperfect, makeshift system overpowers you. Do not postpone too freely and too readily.

It would be well to remember, however, since after all a book can only occupy one space on the shelves and can therefore receive but one class number no matter how many subjects it treats or touches upon, that so long as the classification of a collection is done consistently, so long as all material on like subjects is grouped together on the shelves, it does not vitally matter whether every other librarian of your acquaintance would agree with you in every one of your decisions. First be sure to get a clear idea as to the author's intent, his viewpoint, and the purpose of the book and then find the best class number to fit it. The public is rarely sufficiently familiar with the library's scheme of classification to do more than acquire a general idea of it, and in any case it should not be encouraged to depend solely on the classification — in other words on the books grouped together on the shelves in the various classes — for all material on a desired subject. That would be misleading. It is the catalog after all which should supply full information regarding the material on any given subject contained in the library, whether classed by itself under its own subject class number or — of necessity — with some other subject with which it is bound or incorporated. A book considered a year or so ago may have been placed by you in a certain class and if reconsidered to-day, in the light of added experience and increased knowledge of the subject and its ramifications, might be differently classified. Every wide-awake librarian, as her knowledge of a subject expands and increases, is prone at times to change her mind regarding her own decisions, yet it would not be conducive to her peace of mind if every time she changed that she also changed the class number.

Now in making your catalog you should endeavor to make it answer clearly, fully and concisely the following questions, or it will not avail you much to have one:

1. What books does the library possess by a certain author? e.g., What have you in the library by Hamilton W. Mabie?
2. Does it contain a book with a certain title? e.g., Have you the "Spell of Italy"?
3. What books have you on a certain subject? e.g., What have you in the library on Pyrography, Wireless telegraphy, Woman suffrage, Neutrality of Belgium, Aerial warfare, etc.?

Your catalog must tell also where the books which these questions indicate are to be found, when in their proper places on the shelves. Your accession book, if you have one, is merely a numerical record of your collection, while your shelf list is classed in form. These will not give you the complete information afforded by the catalog. Nor can you use the shelf list as conveniently and quickly; for, unless you are thoroughly familiar with the classification of each book, you will not readily find the one you seek in the shelf list.

The catalog, then, compiled to convey fully such items of information as I have just enumerated, becomes a most useful tool, not only satisfying to the public, but saving of the health and strength and time of the librarian.

If you cannot afford the time or the money to have a complete dictionary catalog, at least have an author and title catalog, and make use of the shelf list as a partial subject catalog. I say a partial subject catalog, because, as I have explained before, the shelf list, while it will guide you to the books in the various classes, will not assist you to separate articles or chapters bearing on a given subject, so that you can answer fully such questions as "Give me something on Dutch costumes," or "something about Hallowe'en," or "Have you anything about coffee houses in your library," or a work about raffia, or about national flowers, about Scotch plaids, etc.?

Whether your catalog be simple or complex, showing practical common sense or merely a desire to be considered erudite, be consistent. Use always the same set code of rules, which you may select for your purpose; make your entries uniform and have a practical reason for all you do. Think of your successor, who will bless you (or the reverse) as she finds the work methodically done or done according to a different rule or idea each day. If you decide one day to put all books on tacks under Tacks or all books on roses under Roses, do not put the next addition on those subjects under Nails or Flowers, respectively. Take the A.L.A. Catalog rules — or others, should you prefer them — decide which rules you wish to adopt, annotate your copy of the rules fully, indicating where you would omit, where you would change, and where you would make additions. If possible, get a paper-covered copy of the rules, send it to your binder, and have it interleaved and bound; this will give you one blank page for each printed one, on which to note your additions, alterations and notes.

In carrying out the rules thus decided upon, consider carefully beforehand what cards you will make and what forms you will use. Put yourself in the position, first, of the average ignorant borrower (ignorant in so far as the use of a catalog is concerned) who knows in many cases only that he wants a certain book but who does not always know how to look for it, and secondly, of the intelligent cataloger or librarian, familiar with her books and her tools, acquainted with the various technical terms used in her profession and thoroughly conversant with her own particular collection of books and her catalogs at least. If you are librarian and cataloger in one (and I know that this is the case in most small libraries and even in medium-sized ones, where whatever assistants there are, are usually raw material), you will not receive your books from the hand of an expert, with all entries to be made carefully indicated either on the title-page or its verso; you will be obliged to think and judge for yourself, clearly and rapidly, and determine the number and kind of cards you will make for each book. It does not follow that the greater the number of cards you make, the more creditable your work will be. Unless each one of these cards is needed, is useful, your judgment has been at fault. Observe carefully the "ignorant" borrower; from him you may gain much if you will but make careful note of what he asks for and how his mind works in regard to the entries he seeks. Be open to suggestions from anybody and everybody, culling the best.

In short, in all this work call to your aid all the common sense you possess, and you will not go far astray. And while you are to adopt the motto "Be consistent" as your guide, read beneath it "Use your common sense, and exercise good judgment." For you must not be consistent to an exasperating degree. I read somewhere not long ago "Consistency thou art a mule," instead of a "jewel"; and I fear that is sometimes true. Yet remember, too, that cataloging is made up of details and it pays in the long run to devote the necessary attention to these details. It does not take longer to do a thing correctly, even to the most minute detail of punctuation or capitalization, than it would to do it poorly or carelessly. I have heard students complain that it seemed so unnecessarily tedious to them to observe such unimportant (?) details as commas and semicolons, yet it seems to me that of necessity a well-trained mind would want to use even these minor nuisances in their proper places. A good cataloger must be accurate and consistent, with sound judgment and common sense and a fair and open mind constantly on the alert regarding the needs and the demands of the reader, for whom the catalog is primarily intended and who (when he cannot readily find what he wants) cannot always be designated as "gentle."

PRACTICAL APPLICATION

Up to this point, I have been laying down general principles upon which you are to work. Lack of cataloging principles in a librarian is as dangerous to a library as lack of moral principles in an individual is to society. Unless you become imbued with these general principles, you can make but small headway in their application as set forth in the remarks which follow. I have been considering, in other words, what we want to do and now I proceed to tell how to do it. I shall begin by outlining what cards are needed in forming a simple catalog and shall then take up the various types point by point. Each book requires on an average from three to five cards. All cards are named from the entry on the upper line, and fall into four main classes:

1. The Main or Author Card.
2. The Title Card.
3. The Subject Card.
4. The Cross Reference Card.

Sample cards follow each point taken up.

When preparing to catalog a book, first read the title page carefully; then glance through the table of contents and if necessary skim through the text in order to get an accurate knowledge of the class and subject matter. When you have done that, decide

- (a) On the main or author entry.
- (b) On the added entries and references to be made.
- (c) On the fullness of title to be used.

(d) On the fullness and form of the author's name and the names of other individuals for whom cards are to be made.

When that has been done you are ready to begin the Author Card, or more properly speaking the Main Card, the first card made in all cases. This may be any one of a number of types; e.g.,

1. The Simple Author entry under a single personal author, whether he happens to be the actual writer of the work or the editor, compiler, translator or illustrator responsible for it.

2. Entry for an author who has used a Pseudonym or nom-de-plume.

3. Entry for an Anonymous book or a book written under Initials only.

4. Entry for a work by Joint authors; a book written conjointly by two or more authors.

5. Entries for Periodicals.

6. Entries for Cyclopedias and Dictionaries.

7. Entries for Almanacs, Year-books and Directories.

8. Entries for Anonymous classics and Sacred books.

9. Corporate entries (for Government publications, Associations, Institutions, Societies, etc.)

Besides this Main entry and the Subject, Title and Cross reference entries, there are other forms to be considered:

- (a) The Analytic entry, which may be under Author, Title or Subject, or under all three.

- (b) The added entry for Editor, Translator, Compiler, Commentator, Illustrator.

- (c) The Series entry.

- (d) The Partial or Changed Title entry.

- (e) The Subject entry for Individual biography.

- (f) Entries for Added editions, Supplements and Continuations, Keys and Indexes.

- (g) Entries for Revisions or Abridgments, Epitomes, Adaptations, Extracts or Collections, for a Criticism or Bibliography, for Concordances, Music, Doubtful or Attributed authors, etc.

Let us take up in detail these different cards in a dictionary catalog.

CHAPTER III

AUTHOR ENTRIES

THE SIMPLE AUTHOR CARD UNDER A PERSONAL AUTHOR

In order to make clear how names of various forms and nationalities should be entered I append the following list to serve as examples:

SIMPLE AUTHORS, WITH ONE OR MORE FORENAMES.

Bealby, J. T.
Brooks, Phillips, bishop of Massachusetts.
Brown, James F.
Brown, John F.
Brown, Robert, 1767-1820.
Brown, Robert, 1885-or Brown, Robert, engineer.
Brown, Robert, poet.
Bryan, W. J.
Cooper, J. F.
Crawford, F. M.
Fox, John, jr.
Fryer, John.
Goethals, G. W.
Hale, Rev. E. E.
Howells, W. D.
Manning, H. E. cardinal.
Maver, William, jr.
Roosevelt, Theodore.
Shakespeare, William.
Thackeray, W. M.

SURNAMES WITH PREFIXES AND SUFFIXES, FOREIGN AND ANGLICIZED. (A title of rank usually precedes the prefix which follows the name in a heading.)

Annunzio, Gabriele d'.
Aulnay, Louise d'.
Balzac, Honoré de.

Beethoven, Ludwig van.
Brink, B. E. C. ten.
Brink, Jan ten.
Chateaubriand, F. A. vicomte de.
Craven, Mme. Pauline (de La Ferronnays).
Da Costa, Isaac.
D'Avenant, Sir William.
De Costa, B. F.
De Foe, Daniel.
De Forest, J. W.
De Garmo, Charles.
De Koven, H.L.R.
Delafield, Richard.
De La Pasture, Mrs. Elizabeth (Bonham).
Del Mar, Alexander.
De Pinna, Joseph.
De Puyster, Frederic.
De Quincey, Thomas.
De Ricci, Seymour.
Descartes, René.
D'Este, Margaret.
Dubois, C. F. T.
Du Bois, William.
Du Boisgobey, Fortuné.
Du Chaillu, P. B.
Gama, Vasco da.
Goethe, J. W. von.
La Fare, C. A. marquis de.
La Farge, John.
La Fontaine, Jean de.
La Hire, Jean de
Lamartine, A. M. L. de P. de.
La Motte Fouqué, F. H. K. freiherr de.
Le Feuvre, Amy.
Le Gallienne, Richard.
Legrand, Louis.
Lemaire, Ferdinand.
Le Sage, A. R.
Lepinasse, J. J. E. de.
Muset, Alfred de.
Sainte-Beuve, C. A.
Scheffel, J. V. von.
Schiller, J. C. F. von.
Ten Brook, Andrew.
Van Alstyne, Mrs. F. J. (C.)

Van Arsdale, John.
Vanbrugh, Sir John.
Van Buren, Martin.
Vanderbilt, Cornelius.
Van der Hoogt, C. W.
Van Dyck, Sir Anthony.
Van Dyke, Henry, D.D.
Voltaire, F. M. A. de.
Von Degen, Albert.
Vondel, Joost van den.
Vorbeck, Friedrich von.
Wildenbruch, Ernst von.
Zobeltitz, Fedor von.

AUTHORS WITH COMPOUND NAMES. (Enter under the first half of the name, with reference from the second part.)

Baring-Gould, Rev. Sabine.
Betham-Edwards, M. B.
Calderon de la Barca, Pedro.
Castro y Bellvis, Guille de.
Cervantes-Saavedra, Miguel de.
Delafaye-Bréhier, Mme. Julie.
Dubut de Laforest, J. L.
La Motte Fouqué, F. H. K. freiherr de.
Leroy-Beaulieu, P. P.
Lloyd-George, David.
Menéndez y Pelayo, Marcelino.
Merle d'Aubigne, J. H. D. D.
Núñez de Arce, Gaspar.
Palacio Valdes, Armando.
Pardo Bazán, Emilia.
Schulze-Smidt, Bertha.
Seton-Thompson, Ernest.
Simonde de Sismondi, J. C. L.
Viолет-Le-Duc, E. E.
Watts-Dunton, Theodore.

NOBLEMEN. (Entry under Title or Family name, whichever is better known. If in doubt enter under the Title. A Title of rank usually precedes the prefix which follows the name in a heading.)

Beaconsfield, B. D. 1st earl of.
Besant, Sir Walter.

Bismarck-Schönhausen, O. E. L. fürst von.
 Chesterfield, P. D. S. 4th earl of.
 Imbert de Saint-Amand, A. L. baron.
 Rosebery, A. P. P. 5th earl of.
 Saint-Simon, L. de R. duc de.
 Scott, Sir Walter, bart.
 Talleyrand-Périgord, Dorothée (von Biron), duchesse de.
 Walpole, Horace, 4th earl of Orford.

MARRIED WOMEN AND OTHERS WHO HAVE CHANGED THEIR NAMES. (For a married woman with but one Christian name, it is best to write out both Christian name and maiden name in full. If there are two or more forenames or married names, give initials only. The maiden name of a married authoress or its initial may be placed in curves on all cards where it is used.)

Earle, Mrs. Alice (Morse).
 Duff-Gordon, C. L. (afterwards Mrs. Aubrey Waterfield).
 { Ward, Mrs. E. S. (P.) or { Phelps, E. S. (afterwards Mrs. Ward).
 { Freeman, Mrs. M. E. (W.) or
 { Wilkins, M. E. (afterwards Mrs. Freeman).
 { Riggs, Mrs. K. D. (S.) W. or
 { Wiggin, Mrs. K. D. (S.) (afterwards Mrs. Riggs).
 { Parsons, Mrs. F. T. (S.) D. or
 { Parsons, Mrs. F. T. (S.) (formerly Mrs. Dana) or { Dana, Mrs. F. T. (S.) (afterwards Mrs. Parsons).
 Jackson, Mrs. H. M. (F.) H.
 Parsons, Mrs. F. M.
 Ward, Mrs. M. A. (A.) (Mrs. Humphry Ward).
 { Rohlf, Mrs. A. K. (G.) or { Green, A. K. (afterwards Mrs. Rohlf).

POPES AND SOVEREIGNS, RULING PRINCES, SAINTS AND OTHERS who are entered under the FORENAMES only. (For Sovereigns, etc., use Roman numerals after their names in headings. Enter Popes under the Latin form of their names. Enter Sovereigns and Ruling Princes in the vernacular, with titles in English.)

Albert I, prince of Monaco.
 Augustine, saint, archbishop of Canterbury.
 Chrysostomus, Joannes, saint, archbishop of Constantinople.

Dante Alighieri.
Edward of Norwich, 2d duke of York.
Franz Joseph I, emperor of Austria.
Geoffrey of Monmouth.
George, prince of Wales.
Henri IV, king of France.
Howard de Walden, T. E. Ellis, 8th baron.
Karl, archduke of Austria.
Leo XIII, pope.
Louis XIV, king of France.
Napoleon I, Bonaparte, emperor of the French.
Omar Khayyām.
Pius X, pope.
Thomas the Rhymer.
Umberto I, king of Italy.
Victoria, queen of Great Britain and Ireland.
Wilhelm II, German emperor.

One of the first essentials in making the Author Card is that there should be uniformity in the form and fullness of the author's name used as a heading. For instance, books by Samuel Langhorne Clemens have been published under his full name, under its abbreviated form, S. L. Clemens, and also, more frequently, under his pseudonym or nom de plume, Mark Twain. If you should decide to place all of this author's books under his real name, Clemens, make the reference from Twain and enter no books under the latter; conversely, if you should prefer to enter his works under his pseudonym, make the reference from his real name to his pseudonym and enter no books under the real name. If you do not follow this rule exactly, you will have works by the same author appearing in different parts of the catalog under various name headings, and so that first requisite of a good catalog, which is to answer the question, "What books does the library contain by a certain author," will remain unfulfilled. Be consistent not only in the form of the name you adopt, but in the fullness you decide to use. If you enter one author's works under his surname, with the initials of his forenames, do this for all authors; and especially avoid inconsistency in this matter in the case of different books by the same author. That is, if you are entering books under the heading Thackeray, William Makepeace, enter all this author's works under this heading; and, moreover, in the same catalog it would manifestly be inconsistent to have the heading Thackeray, William M. or Thackeray, W. M., since in such case the same author's name would appear in full in one place, with secondary fullness in another, and in the third in very abbreviated form with initials only. A moment's thought, too, will show that a difficulty in filing will present itself if part of an author's works are entered under his full name and part under his surname with one forename written out or with initials. It is really immaterial which form of name you adopt or how fully you give it, though, I repeat, I would recommend giving it with secondary fullness, but whichever you adopt, adhere to it under all circumstances and make cross references from the form you do not use to the one you use if there is the slightest possibility that the former may be looked for. For example, you may, though I hope you will not, decide to enter Dickens under his full name Dickens, Charles John Huffam, or Dickens, C. J. H. In that case it would be the part of wisdom to refer from the well-known form of Dickens, Charles. I should not advise the use of full names in small libraries for authors with more than one forename, except in the case of pseudonyms, which should always be written out in full, followed by the word "pseud." In the case of two authors having the same single forename, I should supply dates of birth and death to differentiate them. If these can not be ascertained, use some distinguishing or characterizing word or phrase instead, as, Brown, Charles, author; Brown, Charles, entomologist; or, Brown, Charles, Englishman; Brown, Charles, American. In the case of two authors having the same initials, I should write out the first forename of each and if these be alike, the other forenames also. Should both forenames be alike, follow the practice suggested above for authors having single forenames alike.

Preferably I should give the author's names with secondary fullness on the author card in all cases. This means writing out his name in full if he has but one forename, and giving his initials if he has more than one, as is done on all secondary or added entry cards in very full cataloging. It seems more satisfactory to the users of the catalog as a rule and simplifies some of the problems of alphabetizing or filing. Give titles of nobility and ecclesiastical titles but ignore all other honorary titles or degrees except those of the church (as Rev., D.D., etc.).

If an author (usually a married woman) has changed her name after you have entered one or more of her works, or if you find later that she is known by another name, do not change your entry, since this, as in the case of a pseudonymous entry, would necessitate not only rewriting your card, but renumbering your book, etc. Add instead to the main cards of that author already in the catalog the more recent information, making a reference from the newly discovered name to the one you have used; e.g., Wiggin, Mrs. K. D. (S.) (afterwards Mrs. Riggs); or Parsons, Mrs. F. T. (S.) (formerly Mrs. Dana). Even if adding the new information to the author cards would involve rewriting a number of cards, you will find it worth while to do so, though this difficulty may be overcome by leaving the entries already written as they are and adding a separate card with the heading in full (but no book title) to stand in front of all entries under that author.

If an editor or compiler or translator is responsible for the work he has edited or compiled or translated, in which case as a rule no author is given, make the main entry under the editor, translator or compiler, adding the abbreviation ed., comp., tr., after his name as the case may be; e.g., Bartlett, John, comp.; Lang, Andrew, ed.

When making your Author card always begin on the top line with the author's surname followed by his forenames given with secondary fullness (e.g., the forename in full if there is but one, and initials of the forenames only if there is more than one, except in the case of a married woman with but one Christian name, when both Christian name and maiden name are best written out in full). The maiden name of an author or the initial of that name may be placed in curves if desired. If ruled catalog cards are used always begin the author entry out at the first or left vertical line, in other words at the first or author indention. If unruled cards are being used, begin about one inch to the right of the left margin of the card, or 9 typewriter spaces. If the author entry requires more than one line begin the second and succeeding lines in at the second or right vertical line, in other words at the second or title indention. If the cards are unruled this would necessitate beginning one and one-half inches from the left margin of the card, equivalent to 14 spaces on the typewriter. The author entry on every card, except the series card (whether author, title or subject card), begins at the first or author indention, though it begins on the top line only on the author card. All other entries except the series entry (whether title, subject or cross reference) begin on all cards (except the series card) at the second or title indention.

On the Main card, whether simple author, joint author, corporate entry or other, give the title pretty fully, but omit all matter not really essential, all that part of the title which is merely repetition and neither adds to the value of the title nor gives information not already furnished. Omit also all initial articles, in English, except in rare instances where it is really needed to make sense (not articles in the body of the title) and all unnecessary introductory words of well-known titles, such as History of Henry Esmond, Life and adventures of Robinson Crusoe, Adventures of Oliver Twist, History of David Copperfield, Tragedy of Hamlet, etc. Do not alter the wording of the title or the spelling of words in the title but give it exactly as it is on the title page. Explanatory words or phrases may be added in the exceptional cases where it is deemed necessary. In such case I should recommend bracketing the additional matter to remind yourself that it did not appear on the title page; e.g., Moral overstrain [and other sketches]; The President's [Thomas Jefferson] message. An omission of part of the title in the body of the title may be indicated by three dots . . .

Reduce the title to a single sentence (it will only occasionally happen that this cannot be done), using a period only at the end of the title. Begin the title on the line below the author entry, in, at the second or title indention, bringing the second or succeeding lines out to the first or author indention. Capitalize the first word of the title (and the word following if the first is an article), the first word only of an alternative title or any phrase or title quoted and all proper nouns and proper adjectives. For books in the French and German languages always use the initial article, enclose it in curves, but disregard it in alphabetizing. For works of history and travel, I should advise all librarians, if they wish to make books on these subjects especially useful, to insert in the title the dates covered, unless, as may often happen with a book of travel, the date of publication coincides with the date of actual travel. For example, Macaulay's "History of England" (that is, with the clause "from the accession of James the Second" omitted) is a title which would lead one unacquainted with the work to infer that it covered the entire period of English history, at least to the date of publication. In like manner Burnet's "History of his own time" is rather vague and indefinite to one unacquainted with Burnet. Marco Polo's "Account of Japan and Java," published in Boston in 1892, should certainly have the date 1298 inserted in the title.

One centimeter (or one half inch) space after the title give the date, and one centimeter space thereafter, the number of volumes if more than one. Give the date of publication or imprint date, and the copyright date or inclusive copyright dates if it differs more than one year from the date of publication. If there is no imprint date give the copyright date or inclusive dates, or failing that the preface or introduction date. "n.d." meaning "no date" is written in place of the date when that cannot be ascertained.

Any date, however, even though a doubtful or approximate one (e.g., 189?) is better than "n.d." particularly for works of science, a subject in which books are constantly being rewritten and brought up to date and where the dates will often determine the usefulness of a book to the borrower. For such books also, and for others which are being constantly reprinted with revised text or additional matter, a mention of the edition, directly following the title, is desirable. As a rule the copyright date or other date not given on the title page is bracketed [] to show that fact, but in brief cataloging, particularly if the typewriter is used, that is not essential, unless the brackets would tend to separate two dates; e.g., 1895 c90; c1900-10; but 1913 [1885-1912].

If the book is one of a series and the series is important or well-known enough to warrant it, add the name of the series, in curves, after the date of publication or the number of volumes, one centimeter space away. You will rarely, almost never, be called upon to give more particulars regarding imprint and collation than this.

CONTENTS AND NOTES

On the author card, also, give contents of books containing several works by the same author; or works by several authors; or works on several subjects; or a single work on a number of distinct subjects, especially if the collective title does not sufficiently describe them; of books of essays (as a rule), literary, scientific and other; of collective biography and sometimes of books containing short stories, sketches, plays or poems, particularly if they have been published separately in magazine or other form and are therefore likely to be known by their separate titles. Use judgment, however, and do not give contents when inordinately long, covering many cards, except in particular instances where it seems absolutely necessary.

When writing the card by hand, give the contents in smaller letters, generally on the main card only, though if they are short they may be repeated on the subject card when deemed necessary properly to describe the work. On the subject card, if not repeated thereon, add a note which reads: "For contents see the main card." Sometimes, when contents are given on the title page they may be included in the title if not too long; e.g., Sudermann, Hermann. Morituri, three one-act plays: Teja, Fritzchen, The Eternal masculine. If different parts of the contents are written by different authors, give the name of the author after its title with the initials only of the forenames and not inverted, preceded by a comma and "by." If the contents are not too long use a separate line for each item. If it makes the contents more valuable arrange them alphabetically (as in the case of Vasari's Lives of Italian painters).

If there is no note, leave one line blank after the imprint before giving contents. If there is a note, do not leave a blank line following the note, but on a new line directly under the note, beginning in, at the right vertical line or title indention, write the word Contents, followed by a colon. On the next line, also at the second indention, begin and give the running contents, separating the different items by a semicolon and beginning each with a capital letter. Omit the initial article as you would for any title, but if it is necessary to use it, capitalize it and the word following. Keep the entire contents at the title indention. If the work comprises more than one volume, begin the contents of each volume on a new line, writing v.1, v.2, etc., in the space between the two vertical lines, between author and title indention. When each volume has a general heading and subdivisions, both being essential, give both, with a colon after the general heading, e. g., comedy by C. M. Gayley; John Heywood, critical essay, by A. W. Pollard.

- v. 2 Later contemporaries of Shakespeare: Ben Jonson and others.
v. 3 Later contemporaries of Shakespeare: Fletcher and others.

This may be true also of the contents in a work of one volume. If the contents prove too long for one card, write on the main card until you come to the line broken by the hole; do not write on that line or on the one below it, which is the last line on the card, unless you have but a few more words or one line to add, or unless you can finish on that card. Instead, take a new card, an extension card, so called, and begin it as though it were a continuation of the first; e.g., go right on and continue the contents, beginning however, not on the top line but on the second line of the new card, at the title indention. At the extreme top, in the middle, of the second and succeeding cards, write a small 2, 3, etc., in black or red ink. On the back of the second (and succeeding cards if you have them) write the author's surname and a brief title of the book, so that should these cards become separated from the main card you will be able to readily trace it. For the same reason write the class and book number on each card in its proper place. If you neglect to do this, you will have no clue to the main card, should the others become separated from it. At the bottom of the first card, in the right-hand corner, write in red or black ink and in small letters, "see next card" to show the reader there is more to follow. Repeat this on every card except the last card. Tie these cards together (preferably with Barbour's linen thread, 3 cord, No. 25), leaving the loop loose enough for the insertion of a lead pencil or the little finger.

When the reader would be more apt to look for a work under the subject, as in the case of collective biography, either under the general heading Biography or the more specific headings, Authors, Physicians, Sovereigns, etc., give the contents on the subject card instead of on the author card, making a note on your main card to read as follows "For contents see under the subject 'Authors,' 'Physicians,' etc.," as the case may be. If the contents are very short, it is well to repeat the items on the author card. If at all in doubt, add them to the main card.

All necessary annotations should appear on the author card. By annotations, or notes, is meant such necessary information supplied by the cataloger as will indicate in the fewest possible words (a) the work to which the given book is a sequel; (b) the part or parts of a set that are missing or as yet unpublished; (c) the different title under which a book has been published; (d) any defects of the book annotated; (e) the treatment, characterization, purpose or scope of the book, should the title itself not indicate these features explicitly enough. In fact notes should be added whenever it is necessary to explain the title or to correct any misapprehension to which it might lead, and also to supply essential information regarding the author and bibliographical details not given in the title or imprint. For example, I have recently seen a book entitled "Domestic economy." In this case the title was certainly not very enlightening, since the book treated of the domestic economy of the human system, the digestive apparatus, in fact, and not at all of what is usually understood by the term "Domestic economy." If you do not feel sufficient confidence in your own ability to annotate such books clearly and succinctly, make use of the work already done by experts, such as the best annotated catalogs, the "American Catalog," the "A.L.A. Catalog," the "Publishers' Weekly," the "A.L.A. Booklist," any of the best reviews, etc. As a rule, all notes should be given in English. If a book calls for both notes and contents add the notes first. Leave one line blank after the entry and begin the note at the title indention. Bring out succeeding lines to the author indention.

CALL NUMBER

In the upper left-hand corner of all cards except cross reference cards, write the call number (class and book number) in black ink, close to the left edge of the card, the class number on the top line, and the book number on the line directly beneath it. For adult fiction I would use no call number of any kind, merely arranging the books on the shelves alphabetically under authors, and by titles under each author. For juvenile fiction I should write J in place of the class number to differentiate such books from adult fiction.

The class number and book number are inseparable. Formerly, whenever the book number was spoken of the class notation was really meant, and later, the entire class, book, volume, and copy number were sometimes called the book number. Technically that is not correct to-day. The class number alone does not make a sufficient call number. There must be something to distinguish each book from all others in the same class; ergo the book number as a rule, brief or elaborate as may be. In small libraries the book number may be, sometimes is, altogether dispensed with, (or, the initial letter only of the author's surname is used), books in any one class being arranged alphabetically by authors. In such case, as with works of fiction, the accession number may be made to serve the purpose when charging a book to a borrower. The Sanborn-Cutter Author Table, of 3 figures, enables one to arrange books on the shelves alphabetically by author, by marking them with the initial of the author's family name, or surname, followed by one or more decimal figures according to this table, so constructed that names whose initials are followed by some of the first letters of the alphabet have first numbers, and those in which the initial is followed by later letters have later numbers. In case of authorless books, periodicals, etc., the alphabetic order is determined by the heading which has been chosen for cataloging.

When the call number has been supplied to this author card, I think we may say we have finished with the face of it, at least, for I should strongly advise that you do no tracing on the face of the card. In other words, do not indicate on the face of the card, the title card, the subject card, or other added entry made. Tracings are meant for the use of the librarian only, and it is better not to confuse the public with them. On the back of the main card trace or indicate all other cards you have made for the book cataloged. If you have made a title card, say title; if an editor or translator card, say ed. or tr., or write the surname of the editor or translator; if a series card, the word "series" will suffice. If subject cards have been made for the book, write on the back of your author card the various subject headings under which you have put it. Cross references, particularly subject cross references, need not be traced in this way, as they refer to the subject in general, to the subject in the abstract, not to any one particular book treating of that subject. As I have before remarked, this tracing of the various cards in the catalog is of use only to the librarian. It enables her when discarding a book from the catalog to remove all cards, or when changing the number of a book to change it on all cards. You may be able to remember that you have made title cards and series cards and editor cards and even subject cards; but you will very rarely recollect what subject cards, unless in the cases where the subject catch-word is in the title. Your successor will require this key even more than you.

If you have no shelf list, write your accession number also on the back of the main card. If you have a shelf list, however, this is not necessary, as the accession number is always given on your shelf list card, and you will rarely refer to the catalog for such information. (See sample shelf list cards, page 4.)

TITLE ENTRIES

Next in order we shall take up the title card, the first of your added or secondary entries. This entry must answer the question "Have you this book in the library," and "who wrote it?" but both answers may be as brief as possible. It is better to err on the side of making too many than on that of making too few title cards or references. It is somewhat surprising, when you come to think of it, how many people ask for books by their titles and appear to have only a vague knowledge, if any, of the authors. Make, therefore, a title card, when you think there is the slightest chance that a book may be asked for by its title. Make title cards for all works of fiction, all plays and poems published singly or separately, all books published anonymously whose authorship has been discovered, all books published under a pseudonym, and all books with striking or catch titles. If a book is well known by any part of its title, by the second part of the title, by a running title, a half-title, a binder's title, a changed title, or by any title differing from the title-page, make an added entry under that title; that is, in addition to your regular title card, make an extra title card or cards, bringing out the catch word under which the book may be known and asked for. No added title card is required for an anonymous book while its author is unknown, as the main card answers the purpose of a title card also.

Whenever you can, make a title reference instead of a title card. This can always be done for the various editions or translations of a classic or other well-known work. To explain: if you have in your library many editions of the same book, for instance, the Iliad of Homer, or Macbeth by Shakespeare, make one card under the title for that book,— in other words, one title reference, which will refer the reader to the main or author cards for all added information. This card will read as follows: "Iliad, see Homer," or "Macbeth, see Shakespeare, William," and thus will serve to economize time, space and material.

On the title card give in all cases but a brief title and date with the number of volumes if more than one, except for works of fiction when the number of volumes may be omitted, and in very small libraries the date also. Give the author's surname, or surnames if joint authors, with initials of forenames only, or, preferably, omit the forenames altogether, giving the surname only. Use the call number, if you are making a regular title entry, but omit it on a title reference card, as the call number will differ for various editions of a book. When making the title card begin your title (with the first word not an article, in English) on the top line, in at the second or title indention. Give a brief title only, followed by a period, and one centimeter thereafter, the date of publication or the copyright date if there is no imprint date, or "n.d.", and the number of volumes one centimeter after the date. I repeat, however, that for quite small libraries I should omit date and volumes on all title cards. If the title requires more than one line begin all at the second indention, so that nothing will be written out at the author indention above the author's name. On a new line, out at the author indention, begin the author entry, giving the author's surname only. No tracing is made on this or any other secondary or added entry card.

CHAPTER V

SUBJECT ENTRIES

After you have made the author and title cards for a book, make the subject card or cards, except when the book is a work of fiction, a single play, an essay, or a poem which does not require it. As a rule all works of non-fiction except those just cited require at least one subject card.

The most interesting, the most important, and at the same time the most difficult part of cataloging is the subject cataloging or subject indexing of your collection, the bringing out the subject matter contained in books, in such manner that none of it will be lost to the public. This is the essentially vital part of cataloging, for the subject matter contained in a library is in constant demand, while the author and title use of the catalog is comparatively slight. Knowledge of the various forms of cataloging, the making of author, title, editor, cross reference, and even subject cards, while necessary as a foundation for good cataloging, making for an ordered mind, is not as vital to the success of a catalog, its rapid and easy consultation by the average person using it, as is the entry of the subject matter, the selection of the best-fitted heading in each case, and the ability to decide on the necessary cross references intelligently and fully without danger of overdoing. Combine with this, common sense and good judgment in abundance and a mind alert and constantly open to new expressions, new terms, and the opinions and experiences of the vast majority—the public as well as those attendants in the library who come in constant daily contact with the reader and the searcher after information and who have therefore to a large extent his — the outsider's — point of view.

Headings should be carefully chosen and only such used as most closely express in each case the subject or subjects to be brought out, as clearly and as specifically as possible, in order to be most useful and most readily found and understood by the average intelligent user of the catalog. There must be uniformity in the headings selected, that the same heading may be used for all books of similar content. It is often difficult to choose between headings which are either synonymous or of related or opposite meaning. Care, judgment and foresight must be exercised and cross references made from the discarded form to the chosen one.

A broad point of view and a mind open to suggestion and conviction are most useful assets to a successful cataloger. These qualities will prevent an insistence on one's own opinion merely because it is one's own and will engender an alertness which will be ever ready to change to a better form or better heading when one has been pointed out or thought out and weighed and not found wanting. Constant vigilance, a flexible consistency, and a conservative iconoclasm are the price of a first-class subject catalog.

The best catalogs and catalogers in the best appointed libraries show great diversity of usage and trend of thought. The A.L.A. subject heading book was the outcome of the discussions at the A.L.A. meetings concerning their diverse usage among libraries, and that has proved a most helpful guide. The third edition is much enlarged and a great improvement on the first, both as to its content and its make-up. Complete as it seems, however, to the casual reader and the cursory examiner, it does not nearly satisfy the requirements of the insatiable cataloger who uses it constantly, for she knows its lacks and knows, moreover, that it is almost humanly impossible to have it really complete and up to date. For new terms come up and old terms go out, and some that are not noted seem better than their substitutes on the printed page. Scientific terms die out and become old-fashioned while others sprout up to take their places, for there is a fashion in subject headings as in all else. There seems nothing for it, therefore, but to add what seems necessary, and retain what seems applicable and satisfactory and for the sake of uniformity and coöperation change only when a better offers, not merely one as good. Any special library has to depend on more than the A.L.A. subject heading guide, has to consult its standard cyclopædias and dictionaries and its own text and reference books for the proper terms. But the A.L.A. List is a splendid guide and is not at all mandatory. Use, therefore, the "A.L.A. List of subject headings for use in dictionary catalogs" as a guide, checking or underscoring each subject as you use it, inserting new subjects which you may decide to use, and crossing out others that you may prefer to discard; checking it, in fact, as you would your code of cataloging rules before mentioned. The blank pages in the new edition will be found ample and convenient for all additions and annotations. Do not feel obliged to use only the subjects mentioned in this list, or all of them. The book is intended as a guide for intelligent users, not as a mandatory direction.

Call to your aid your judgment and common sense, when making your selection of subjects. Remember, I repeat, it is never safe to depend on the title page of the book only. Do not, therefore, assign a heading from the title of a book. It is too often misleading. Make sure of what the book treats before selecting the subject. The table of contents should be carefully looked through and the book itself at least skimmed in all but very obvious cases. In assigning subject headings and in making cross references more absurdities can be perpetrated than in any other branch of library work. I myself discovered in one library a work entitled "Black diamonds" entered under Precious stones; the book was a treatise on the slaves of the South, fancifully called "Black diamonds," by the author; and but recently I have learned that in one of our more important libraries Strong's "Expansion under New World conditions" was placed under the heading Physics, with a cross reference which read "Expansion, see Physics." In another library was found the reference "Turbines, see also Hats," and in the same institution the desire to practice economy of cards by making several entries on one card resulted in this:

Lead kindly light.

" poisoning.

So be wary lest you, too, leave behind you an unintentional work of humor.

Countries, states and cities are not given in the A.L.A. list; but as all history and travel is placed under the name of the country, state or city, with its subhead History, or Description and travel, follow your own knowledge of the book in hand or refer to the Dewey Decimal classification.

Choose a specific subject heading whenever possible. That is, enter a book on ants under the specific heading Ants, not under the more general heading Insects; a book on birds under Birds, not under Zoölogy; a book on diamonds under Diamonds, not under Precious stones, etc.

Be consistent and uniform in your choice of subjects. Do not select the most abstruse or the most erudite form of heading, but the one most likely to be used by the borrowers of your library. Put yourself in the position of a reader, and you will arrive at a much fairer decision regarding what he will ask for than if you make your selection from a merely technical point of view.

Bring out all the subjects treated in a book, particularly if they seem of the least interest to your community. This is most important in a small library, as the subjects included in the book may not appear in your library in separate works. Make first the subject heading that covers the entire book, the general heading, in short; then bring out the various chapters not covered by this general heading under their specific subject headings. In this way you will often be able to make available, for the readers' use and your own, articles upon recent subjects, upon which no complete treatises have been written. Bring out under their specific headings all chapters or items bearing upon the biography of a person, or the criticism of his works; all topics suitable for bulletins, such as author's birthdays, Christmas, Thanksgiving, etc.; all articles bearing upon events of current history, or political topics; upon subjects discussed in the lecture course of the public schools for the year; upon topics made prominent by the grammar and high schools in their curricula; upon subjects studied by the literary and debating clubs of your town or vicinity; and so on ad libitum. In other words, analyze each book in your collection as thoroughly and exhaustively as practicable. You will find hidden in your books of essays much valuable material that will never see the light of day, never reach the people who want and need it (at least not just when they want it most), unless you analyze the contents of your books and make the parts appear in your catalog separately, either under author or title or subject, or under all three when necessary. You will also never realize until you have your tool, your labor-saving machine (the catalog), in perfect order, how much wear and tear you will save yourself both physically and mentally.

Let me add right here, as the most fitting place for it, never waste a topic once looked up. Note the source where you find it under its proper heading at once, and insert the subject in the card catalog in its alphabetic place. You will be repaid for doing this at some future time; for it is more and more impressed upon me that we should not unnecessarily burden our memories with things that can be labeled and pigeon-holed. For example, if a borrower should ask you where to find information regarding any recent legislation upon the subject of municipal ownership of street railways, it might require several hours' search for you to find material that would be satisfactory for his purpose; but if you had made note of this subject by means of analytics when you cataloged your books, a very few moments would place the full resources of your library in your hands.

I would make one exception in advising this thorough analysis, and that is in the case of periodicals and literary essays. These are completely analyzed for us by "Poole's Index," the "Cumulative Index to Periodicals," and the "A.L.A. Index to general literature"; though one word of advice regarding the first mentioned work may not be amiss here. As very few libraries have all or nearly all of the periodicals mentioned in Poole, I would keep it out of the sight and ken of the public. They are always much disappointed (to put it mildly), after having toiled through Poole and found a reference to an article which they wish to read, to learn that the library does not possess the number indicated.

When a book treats specifically of a subject pertaining to a certain country, if you have the time at your disposal, make an additional entry under that country. If you have not the time make an entry under the subject, and a general reference from the country to that or any other subject, except for works of history, description and travel, manners and customs, social conditions, constitutional history, etc., pertaining to any one country, which should always be entered under the country with its proper subhead. In any case do not make the only entry under the country, except for history, travel, manners and customs, social conditions, etc. For example, when cataloging a book treating of the geology of England, make your subject heading under Geology, and under England (or under any other country when required), make a card as follows: "England. For works on a specific subject under this country see the name of that subject, as Geology, Birds, Law, etc." For history, travel, etc., make a general reference under the subject as follows: "History. For the history of any country or subject see the name of that country or subject, etc. etc.," and a heading under the country followed by the subhead History; Description and travel, etc.

Except in the case of language and literature headings, use the noun with a subdivision instead of the adjective form for a subject heading when feasible. Here as always use common sense and judgment and decide each case on its own merits; e.g., do not put every subject under the noun form unless you feel justified in so doing. There are adjective forms so much more popularly known as such that it would be decidedly undesirable, and might prove detrimental to the usefulness of that subject at least in the catalog to use any other form. Country headings when used should always be given in the noun form (e.g., the name of the country with the subhead following) except, as I have already stated, in the case of language and literature headings.

The language or literature of a country should be entered directly under the name of the language or literature, using the adjective form of the country, rather than under the country with its subhead Language or Literature; for example, English language, not England. Language, etc. This is best because the names of languages and literatures may differ widely from those of the countries to which they belong, as do Sanskrit literature,

Gaelic language, Norse language, Provençal literature, Yiddish language, etc. The exceptions to this might be Drama and Essays, which might be made inverted headings, reading "Drama, English," "Essays, French," etc., so as to show the extent of the material under the entire subject at a glance. In the previous edition of this work I advocated the use of the noun with its subhead rather than the adjective form for non-country headings more strongly and unreservedly, suggesting for example that all works on electricity be grouped under Electricity with its various divisions or subheads following; e.g., Electricity. Currents, instead of Electric currents, etc. It has the advantage of keeping all works on Electricity together under one alphabet, as I pointed out, but the advantage is not great enough to counterbalance the disadvantage, in this and similar cases, of not using the better-known and more popular term, which usage has fixed in the minds of the readers. Stick to the "A.L.A. List of subject headings" as far as possible, so as not to have too many exceptions to make note of, unless you feel better results will be reached and so adequately repay you.

Group closely related subjects under a combined heading when possible instead of entering books under each heading; for example, Jews and Judaism, Socialism and communism, Immigration and emigration, Drawing and design, with reference from the second part to the whole.

Unless time and material are extremely scarce, I should always advise making subject cards; that is, a subject card for each book, that the borrower may know at a glance what material the library contains on any subject. If, however, it will mean that the time and material thus saved or gained may be expended to better advantage, the following suggestions may be followed.

For many subjects it is possible to make subject reference cards, such as we have been making and using with marked success in some of the branches of the Brooklyn Public Library for years. By subject references I mean references from the names of such classes in the Dewey Decimal classification (or any other) as cover a single definite subject, to the books arranged under that class number on the shelves. For example, for all books on physics, instead of making separate subject cards under the heading Physics, which would necessitate ten cards if you have ten books on the subject, make instead, one card, "Physics, see books on shelves in class 530." You can do this only in case no other works except those on physics are classified in 530, but you can do this even if works on physics are to be found in some other class. You cannot, for instance, make a reference from Telegraphy to class 654; you cannot say "Telegraphy, see books on shelves in class 654," because you have books upon other subjects than telegraphy in that class; in other words, all books classed in 654 are not on telegraphy. You can, however, say "Gardening, see books on shelves in classes 635, 710," because all books in both those classes treat of gardening.

If, however, you have a chapter or part of a book devoted to physics in a work not classed in physics, you will need to make a regular subject card under the heading Physics; e.g., an outline of Ganot's Physics may be bound with Roscoe's Chemistry. The book is classed in 540 — Chemistry; and as you cannot say "Physics, see books on shelves in class 540," you must make a subject card and not a subject reference for that book. It is better, therefore, to make the subject reference cards see also references.

With an open shelf system, this method will answer very well for the borrower who wishes to know only what books on a certain subject are in the library at the time. For the borrower, however, who desires to know what the library has on a certain subject, such references are not of much value, since all the books on a given subject are not likely to be in at the same time, or may be misplaced on the shelves, so that unless the shelf list is available for the use of the public, I do not recommend the use of such references.

I should suggest a reference like the following, in cases where the library contains many editions of the same work. Make your regular subject card for the first edition received by your library, and for later editions (not copies of the same edition, for which one subject card as one author and one title card will always suffice), note on this subject card as follows: "For other editions of this work see the main card," adding the author's name if you think it necessary.

A subject heading indicates the subject matter treated in the book, what the book is about, while a form heading indicates the form or style in which the book is written, whether essay, poem, fiction, etc. It is treated exactly like a subject heading, and in fact may be both, though not for the same book. That is, you may have a form heading Fiction under which you have grouped all your novels and stories, and at the same time you may have the subject heading Fiction for works about the novel, its history and development, etc., or novel writing, etc. For so large a class of books as Fiction, Poetry or Essays, I do not advise making form headings, as your catalog will soon fill up with innumerable cards. If desired make a reference referring to the class of such books or their position on the shelves; e.g., Poetry, English. For English poetical works see books on shelves classed in 821, etc.

For a children's catalog, a separate catalog of the juvenile books in a library, I might recommend omitting even the few bibliographical items of information on the cards already outlined, but I would rarely recommend using a different set of subject headings for them, changing them to suit their immature minds, though additional headings, not usually required for adult books, may sometimes be well worth while. It is a debated question whether it is well to train children or accustom them to one set of headings when in so short a time they will have become adults and promoted to the use of the adult catalog, but to find another set of terms. The minds and the intelligence of children vary as do those of more mature years. What seems difficult to a child of twelve may be perfectly simple to one of nine years. Besides, children learn and develop rapidly, and as they are rarely afraid to ask questions of one another or of any one for that matter, and do not look upon the catalog as the bugbear viewed by their elders, they soon become accustomed to use it intelligently and understand it much more thoroughly than do many of those same adults.

All subject and form headings are written in red ink.

When making the Subject Card, begin on the top line at the title indention, and write your heading in red ink, keeping all lines of the heading, if it takes more than one, at the title indention.

Leave one line blank, and on a new line, out, at the author indention, give the author's name as you have entered it on the title card, carrying the second and succeeding lines in to the title indention.

On a new line again, beginning at the title indention, give the title of the book, fully enough to make clear to yourself and a reader if possible why that book was put under that heading. As a general thing the title is given on the subject card with as much fullness as it appears on the main card. It is followed by the number of volumes, dates and series note exactly as they appear on the main card. If notes are necessary add them on the subject card and repeat the contents if needed, provided they are not too long. When they are not repeated on the subject card add a note which reads, "For contents see the main card." The call number is written in the upper left-hand corner as on the main and title cards. If your subject heading is inverted, place a comma after the entry word and capitalize the following word; e.g., Greece, Ancient. If your subject heading consists of a main subject with a subdivision, place a period after the main heading and begin the subhead with a capital; e.g., England. Description and travel.

CHAPTER VI

CROSS REFERENCES

As the name implies, these cards refer across from one form of name to another, or from one subject to another or to several others.

Make cross reference cards when they are needed, but be careful not to crowd your catalog with too many, referring back and forth, or on and on, and thus defeating your own purpose; and be very sure not to refer to any subject upon which you have no material. Do not, for example, say, "Economics, see also Strikes and lockouts," when you have no books in the library on strikes and lockouts; wait until you have the books. Your borrower, when he has turned to Strikes and lockouts and found nothing to reward his search, will not be very amiably and charitably disposed toward the library and its librarian; while a second or third occurrence of the same kind may cause serious trouble. When I say "Do not refer on and on indefinitely," or "back and forth," I mean, for example, do not say "Deluge, see Flood," and have the reader turn to that subject only to find "Flood, see Noah," or, "Sea, see Ocean," only to find "Ocean, see Sea," which leads nowhere, as I hope you see.

There are two kinds of cross reference cards: (1) the "see" reference, and (2) the "see also" reference. The "see" reference disposes of the name or subject referred from and places everything under the name or subject referred to. "See" references should be made from any name or heading under which a book may be sought for to the one you have decided to use; usually made from one word or term to another of like or synonymous meaning or from one term to another of opposite meaning, or from the second part of a subject to the first part; e. g., Entomology, see Insects; which means to anyone looking for a book under the heading Entomology, "Yes, we have books on that subject, but you will find them under Insects, therefore see Insects; or Banking, see Banks and banking, or Intemperance, see Temperance, etc. The same is true of names, as already stated; e. g., Wiggin, K. D. see Riggs, Mrs. K. D. (S.) W. which means to one who knows her name of Wiggin and looks for her under that name in the catalog, "Yes, we have Mrs. Wiggin's books, but she has changed her name and you will find all her works contained in the library under her last known name, her married name, Riggs, therefore see Riggs, Mrs. K. D. (S.) W.

"See" references may also be made to cover a number of subjects; e. g., instead of making a separate reference to each country on which you have such material in your library, make one reference which reads: Travel. For travel and description in any country see the name of that country; or, History. For the history of any country or subject see the name of that country or subject.

It is in making "see also" references that you will be most likely to overdo the matter.

A "see also" reference should never be made unless you have material on the subject referred to, in other words unless there is a card in the catalog under that heading. It is not absolutely necessary, however, to have anything on the subject referred from, though logically the "also" should not be added until you have; e. g., logically you should not say Economics, see also Banks and banking while you have no material on Economics in general. But actually it is safer to do that rather than say see, waiting to fill in the also when you have something on Economics. The "see also" reference says in effect that you have material under both the subject referred from and the one referred to. Refer from the general to the specific or subordinate subject, from the general to the related or allied subject, but not, except in rare cases, from specific to general subjects. That is, say "Zoölogy, see also Birds, Insects, Domestic animals," etc. Birds and Insects being specific subjects under the general subject Zoölogy, all in class 590, and Domestic animals a related subject classed in 636. Do not say "Birds, see also Zoölogy"; that is referring back from the specific to the general, and is not needed. When making a "see also" reference like "Economics, see also Banks and banking, Cost of living, Factory system, Government ownership, etc." you say, in effect, "Yes, we have books on economics in general, but if you want anything on banks and banking or the cost of living in particular, look under those headings and you will find what we have on those subjects." Write all these headings referred to on one card, instead of making a separate "see also" card for each in turn, no matter if they are not in alphabetic order. Rewrite the card when it is full and then arrange the entries alphabetically.

I should suggest filing all "see also" subject reference cards in front of all cards on that subject in the catalog trays, rather than at the back, as is the general custom, if you have but one copy of that card. If a reader wants a book on Butterflies and turns to Insects to look for them, he will be saved the searching through a long list of works on Insects if the first card that confronts him under that head directs him to "see also Butterflies," etc. As there is no positive guarantee, however, that the reader always will look for the card at the beginning, I would earnestly advise making two "see also" reference cards in each case (in a small library this can be done without too great an expenditure of time and material), filing one copy at the beginning and the other at the end of a subject.

Readers as a rule, when consulting a given entry in a catalog, dislike to be directed to "see" something else, a fact to be remembered in making cross references. Simple as it may seem to a librarian, the fact yet remains that a "see" or "see also" reference card is sometimes puzzling to a reader. A reference reading, "Political economy. For books on this subject look in this catalog under the heading Economics" may seem a bit clearer than "Political economy, see Economics." Should you decide to use this form it would economize time and labor if you had a stamp made for that part reading "For books on this subject look in this catalog under the heading," to be used on all such cards.

Make all name references in black ink, and all subject cross references in red ink.

Sometimes (but not often) you will have to refer from a red subject heading to a black main heading, in order to save duplication of cards in the catalog, but do not use different ink. As for example:—

Agriculture, see also
United States. Agriculture, Dept. of; or,
United States. History. Civil war period, see also Lincoln, Abraham, etc.

When making your Cross Reference Card, write the name from which the reference is made on the top line, indenting as for a title or subject heading. Write the name to which reference is made on a new line, indenting as for an author. In other words, always begin your cross reference card with the name or heading you are referring from, on the top line, at the title indentation, a comma, then one centimeter space followed by the word "see" or "see also," and on a new line, out, at the author indentation the name or heading to which you are referring, in full, or as you will actually see it on the card referred to; e. g., do not say Wilkins, M. E. see Freeman, Mrs. Mary E (Wilkins) when your entry under Freeman actually reads, Freeman, Mrs. M. E. (W.) When reference is made from one heading to several others, each of the headings to which reference is made is begun out at the author indentation.

"See also" references may be arranged in columns or in paragraph form. The former is preferable and much easier to read.

Following is a list of 150 works of non-fiction, published in recent years, alphabetically arranged, covering a variety of subjects, with their subject headings and cross references suggested. It meant so little extra work and took up so little extra space that I have added the class number (from the Dewey Decimal system of classification) in each case to increase the usefulness of the list. If you will carefully study these, comparing each subject and reference assigned with your "A.L.A. List of subject headings" until each is thoroughly understood, you will find them of great assistance in deciding on subjects and references in future. If there are any which you cannot comprehend I will gladly endeavor to explain my view to anyone who will communicate with me. I have purposely selected only such titles as lend themselves to this purpose without the necessity of handling the books; such titles as unequivocally suggest the subject matter of the book. The list contains no "catch" of any sort. I have tried it with success on several classes of students in cataloging and it is because of the gratifying results thus obtained that I append it here. I only regret that necessity compels the omission of the class "discussions" of doubtful, incorrect or disputed headings. The subject heading in each case appears at the right of the title, the subject references, "see" and "see also" below the title.

I strongly advise you to look up in the dictionary at the time the meaning of any word or term which is not perfectly clear to you. The most expert cataloger finds herself driven to this if she would avoid mistakes or the use of vague or inappropriate terms.

LIST OF 150 BOOKS WITH CALL NUMBER, SUBJECTS AND CROSS REFERENCES ASSIGNED

In some cases, for very small libraries, the subheads following the subjects may be omitted; e. g., for "Clodd's Primitive man" the subject Man will suffice, for Clowes' "Chemistry" without the subhead Analysis is sufficient. Even for history and travel the name of the country will suffice for a heading unless you have material enough to warrant using the subhead. Certain headings may be combined instead of being used separately, and certain references not considered needful omitted for libraries with small collections particularly those which are not expected to increase to any large extent.

Having now made our Main cards for simple and single personal authors with their Title, Subject and Cross reference cards, we shall take up in succession the various other forms of main cards for

- (1) Pseudonymous authors.
- (2) Anonymous books and books written under the author's Initials only.
- (3) Joint authors.
- (4) Periodicals.
- (5) Cyclopedias and Dictionaries.
- (6) Almanacs, Year-books and Directories.
- (7) Anonymous classics and Sacred books.
- (8) Corporate entries.

and following them, the remaining added entries such as:

- (a) Editors, translators, compilers, commentators, illustrators.
- (b) Analytics.
- (c) Series.
- (d) Partial or changed titles.
- (e) Subject entry for Individual biography.
- (f) Entries for Added editions, Supplements and continuations, Keys and Indexes.
- (g) Entries for Revisions or Abridgments, Epitomes, Adaptations, Extracts or Collections, for a Criticism or Bibliography, for Concordances, Music, Doubtful or Attributed authors, etc.

CHAPTER VII

PSEUDONYMS AND INITIALS

For books written under a nom-de-plume or assumed name it is usually suggested that the main entry be made under the best known form of the name, whether real or pseudonymous, with a cross reference from the name not used. As there is certain to be a great divergence of opinion on the part of various librarians and the public in different localities, I recommend, whenever there is the slightest doubt as to which is the better known form that the main entry be made under the real name if it is known (with a cross reference from the pseudonym) as the real name will probably tend to become in time more familiar both to the librarian and her public. If, however, you have once entered a book under the pseudonymous form, do not change the entry, even though the author's later works appear with his real name on the title page. Simply add the real name to the main card already in the catalog in this wise: Merriman, Henry Seton, (pseud. of H.S.Scott), making a cross reference card from Scott to Merriman.

Never abbreviate a pseudonymous name on any card. (This does not mean that certain portions may not be omitted altogether.)

Treat a pen name which is part of the author's real name exactly like a pseudonymous name; e.g., Hawkins, A.H. (Anthony Hope, pseud.)

Make title cards for all books published pseudonymously whether they have distinctive or striking titles or not, except in the case of individual biographies or other books whose titles begin with a personal name, in which case the subject card or other added entry under the personal name will be sufficient.

If the real name of a pseudonymous writer is unknown make the main entry under his assumed name, unabbreviated in any way, adding, one centimeter after it on all cards, the abbreviation "pseud."; e.g., begin at the author indentation on the author card, as you would for a simple author entry and at the title indentation on title and subject cards. For very brief cataloging the surname only of the pseudonymous name need be given on all cards except the author card; e.g.,

331 C28	Carleton, William, pseud. One way out; a middle-class New-Englander emigrates to America. 1911.
------------	--

331 C28	Cost of living. Carleton. One way out; a middle-class New-Englander emigrates to America. 1911.

Subhead "Occupations" not needed for very small libraries.

If you decide to make the main entry under the real name, begin your author entry on the main card as usual at the author indentation with the author's real name, followed (in curves) one centimeter space thereafter, by his pseudonymous name in full and not inverted, and directly after that the abbreviation "pseud." preceded by a period or comma; e.g., Warner, Susan, (Elizabeth Wetherell, pseud.) Dodgson, C. L. (Lewis Carroll, pseud.) (See also "List of well-known pseudonyms" on page 77.) On title and subject cards repeat the author entry as it appears on the main card, except that the surname only of the real name need be given and the pseudonymous name omitted if desired. The pseudonymous name, if given, should follow the real name in curves on all cards except, as I have stated above, on the cross reference card. On this card, as on all cross reference cards, begin at the title indentation with the pseudonymous name, inverted, followed by the phrase "pseud. see" and refer on the line below, beginning at the author indentation, to the real name of the author exactly as it appears on the main card; e.g.,

If you decide to make the main entry under the pseudonymous form of name, begin your author entry on the main card at the author indention with the pseudonymous name inverted, followed one centimeter after by "pseud. of" and the author's real name not inverted in curves and given with secondary fullness; e.g., Eliot, George, (pseud. of Mrs. M. A. (E.) L. Cross). Loti, Pierre, (pseud. of L. M. J. Viaud).

On title and subject cards repeat the author entry exactly as it appears on the main card, except for very brief cataloging, when the surname only of the pseudonymous name need be given.

Make a cross reference card from the real name to the pseudonymous form, and include the word "pseud."

George Eliot and George Sand should always be treated as belonging to this class. They will never become better known by their real names; e.g.,

821	Eliot, George, (pseud. of Mrs. M. A. (E.) L. Cross).
E42	Spanish gypsy. pref. 1868.

When an author has written a certain book under a special pseudonym or several books under different pseudonyms, without using any as a regular pen name, make your main entry always under the real name, and incorporate the pseudonymous name, not in the heading, but in the title of the particular book for which he used it, on the main card only; e.g., Irving, Washington. History of New York by Diedrich Knickerbocker. Make your cross reference card as usual from the pseudonym to the real name; e.g.,

Sharp, William. Green fire, by Fiona Macleod. 1896.

An author who has written but one book and that under a pseudonym does not come under the above head.

The title, edition, imprint, series note, notes and contents, etc., appear on the main and secondary cards for pseudonymous authors as they do on cards with simple author entries.

It would save time for a very small library, instead of writing out the entry in full on the main card each time, to give only the name under which you have decided to enter an author's works, whether real or pseudonymous, omitting the additional form of name. In such case make one card giving full information and file it at the beginning of that author's cards. This would mean giving the information once instead of perhaps ten or twenty times.

INITIALS

If an author has written under initials and his name is not known, make the main entry under his initials, inverting them and giving the last initial first; e.g., S., B. C. Repeat this entry on all added entry cards, all cards, that is, not the main card. Make a cross reference card referring from the initials in the order in which they appear on the title page; e. g., B. C. S. see S., B. C.

If a book is published under initials but the author's name is known, make the main entry under the author's name in the usual way, and one centimeter space thereafter give the initials, in curves, and not inverted; e. g., Tucker, C. M. (A. L. O. E.)

On title, subject and other added entry cards, the surname only of the author's real name need be given.

Make two cross reference cards to the author's name,

- (a) From the initials as they appear on the title page; e.g., A. L. O. E. see Tucker, C. M.
- (b) From the initials in inverted order, the last initial as it appears on the title page to be given first; e.g., E., A. L. O. see Tucker, C. M.

CHAPTER VIII

ANONYMOUS BOOKS

A book is considered anonymous if the author's name does not appear in the book itself.

Enter such books under the name of the author when known, under initials if these are given on the title page, according to the directions above, otherwise under the first word of the title not an article.

Make added entries for the titles of all anonymous books whose authors are known, whether they have distinctive or striking titles or not, even though title cards would not ordinarily be made for those books. When the work relates to a particular person or place make added entry also under the name of the person or place, usually a subject card.

If the author's name is not known and there are no initials, the main entry, under the first word of the title not an article, is begun on the second line of the card at the second or title indentation, the top line being left blank for the author entry should the author's name ever become known. The edition, imprint and collation, etc., are given on this card as on other main cards.

No added title card is required for an anonymous book while its author is unknown, as the main card answers the purpose of a title card also.

Compilations or collections without an editor or compiler may be treated like anonymous books. Sometimes it is considered desirable to treat them as such even when there is an editor (see sample card). For fuller particulars concerning such see ANALYTICS.

CHAPTER IX

JOINT AUTHORS

For a book written conjointly by two authors (including writers of a correspondence or participants in a debate), make the main entry under the name of the first one mentioned on the title page, inverted, followed by the name of the second author, also inverted, preceded by the conjunction 'and'; give both authors with secondary fullness; e.g.,

Allen, T. G. and Sachtleben, W. L.

Make an added entry under the second author or, preferably, a cross reference from his name to the main entry in full. The added entry under the second author I do not recommend where authors have collaborated in more than one work.

Give the second author the first place on the card, beginning at the author indention, followed by the main author inverted and preceded by the word 'and.' On this card give a brief title only with the imprint as it is on the main card, but omit contents, notes, tracing; e.g.,

Sachtleben, W. L. and Allen, T. G.

Across Asia on a bicycle. c1895.

When making a cross reference card for joint author begin the second author at the title indention on the top line, followed one centimeter space thereafter by the phrase 'joint author', and a comma. One centimeter after that write the word 'see' and on a new line, beginning out at the author indention, the main entry in full; e.g.,

Sachtleben, W. L. joint author, see

Allen, T. G. and Sachtleben, W. L.

For a book written conjointly by three authors, make the main entry under the first one mentioned on the title page as usual, followed by the other two, both inverted, all given with secondary fullness. Place a comma after the last forename or title of the first mentioned author and the conjunction 'and' after the second; e.g.,

Cooper, O. H., Estill, H. F. and Lemmon, Leonard.

An added entry or cross reference should be made for the second and third authors according to the directions given for books written conjointly by two authors; e.g., if added entries are preferred they should read as follows:

(a) Estill, H. F., Cooper, O. H. and Lemmon, Leonard.
History of the United States. 1899.

(b) Lemmon, Leonard, Cooper, O. H. and Estill, H. F.
History of the United States. 1899.

If cross references are made instead they should take the following form:

(a) Estill, H. F. joint author, see
Cooper, O. H., Estill, H. F. and Lemmon, Leonard.

(b) Lemmon, Leonard, joint author, see
Cooper, O. H., Estill, H. F. and Lemmon, Leonard.

On all added author cards for joint authors the main author is second; that is, it follows the one for whom the card is made.

For books written conjointly by more than three authors (or, if desired, for more than two), make the main entry under the first one mentioned on the title page as usual, and one centimeter thereafter add the phrase 'and others.' Use a comma after the author's forename or title or a period after his initial; e.g.,

Smith, W. H. and others.

Riggs, Mrs. K. D. (S.) W. and others.

In this case the names of the additional authors which do not appear in the heading, may, if it is thought especially desirable, be included in the title, without inversion and with secondary fullness, or in briefer form if so given on the title page, or they may be given in a note or contents. The advisability of this must be determined in each case by the number of the authors and their importance. If the authors are too numerous to be included in the title, give only the name of the first not mentioned in the heading, or the name of the first and a selection of the best known or most important of the others, adding in brackets the phrase [and others]. If unimportant omit all mention of them.

An added entry or reference may be made for each additional author, but, unless a library wishes to keep a complete record of all its material under all authors, it is important or desirable only in exceptional cases. This may happen if for instance the additional author is of special importance from either the general or the local standpoint, or if for some other reason he is likely to be looked for. If added entries are made, each should consist of the name of the additional author being treated, followed by the main entry, while the other authors' names appear in the title as on the main card; e.g.,

Brown, J. E., Smith, W. H. and others.

White, Benjamin, Smith, W. H. and others.

Cross, J. C., Smith, W. H. and others.

If cross references are made instead, they should read as follows:

Brown, J. E. joint author, see
Smith, W. H. and others.
White, Benjamin, joint author, see
Smith, W. H. and others.
Cross, J. C. joint author, see
Smith, W. H. and others.

If only two or three authors are mentioned on the title page but the book is written conjointly by more than three, treat them as you would books written conjointly by two or three authors respectively except that the phrase 'and others' should be added after the names; e.g.,

Green, Samuel, Miller, Thomas, and others.

Jones, F. J., Simpson, Peter, Thompson, J. S. and others.

Added entries or cross references for the additional authors should be made according to the directions already given.

For joint authorship of corporate bodies (e.g., Societies, Associations or Government departments), make the main entry for the work under the name of the body or author first mentioned on the title page, giving that name only in the heading. Include in the title (without inversion) in a note or in contents the names of additional authors if not more than three. If there are more than three authors follow the directions given for 'Books written conjointly by more than three authors.' (See cards for the A. L. A. Catalog rules on page 104.)

When countries are joint authors it is perhaps better to make a full entry under each country. (See cards for Great Britain. Treaties on page 105.)

If joint authors have the same surname repeat the surname of the second author exactly as though it differed; e.g.,

Terhune, Mrs. M. V. (H.) (Marion Harland, pseud.) and Terhune, A. P.

Lamb, Charles and Lamb, Mary.

Thomson, Mrs. K. (B.) and Thomson, J. C. (Grace and Philip Wharton, pseud.)

Treat joint compilers, editors, or translators when considered as authors exactly like joint authors, except that the designation comp., ed., or tr. is added after the names and substituted in the heading on the cross reference cards in place of 'author.'

When alphabetizing cards for joint authors in the catalogue ignore in the arrangement all except the one first mentioned on the card, except when an author has collaborated with more than one author for different books. Then secondary authors must be filed alphabetically.

Do not confound joint authors of one work with two or more authors of separate works bound together in one volume. The latter would come under the head of "Analytics." Collections or compilations without an editor may sometimes be treated as joint authors by making the main heading under the author of the first part of the book followed by "and others." I would not advocate this, however, except in rare instances. Treat such books rather as anonymous books with the main entry under the title, and analytical author entries for such authors as you deem worth bringing out.

CHAPTER X

PERIODICALS

A word about cataloging periodicals, which cause the librarian more trouble and anxiety and the public more confusion and bad temper than almost anything else in the catalog, except perhaps Corporate entries.

Periodicals may, for cataloging, be divided into two groups: (1) those which have ceased publication and of which the library has complete sets, and (2) those which are still being published, or those of which, though having ceased publication, the library set is incomplete.

Treat periodicals like anonymous books whose authorship has not been discovered, except that no line need be left blank for the author, as no author's name will ever be filled in.

Begin on the top line at the inner indentation with the first word of the title not an article. Bring out the second and succeeding lines of the title to the author indentation. Omit the usual imprint following the title. In a note, or following the title in brackets, indicate the frequency of publication (e.g., Pub. monthly, or [monthly] etc.) unless such information is part of the title of the periodical (e.g., Harper's new monthly magazine, etc.) Indicate in a note also any change in the frequency of publication or change of name of a periodical.

Omit all mention of editors, either in the title or in a note.

After the notes indicate the volumes and years the library has on the left half of the card and what the library lacks on the right of the card, omitting all mention of the months when the volume comprises one calendar year; e.g., directly below the note, or, if there is no note below the title, leaving one line blank, begin at the extreme outer left edge of the card (because of the length of the item to be given on a line) in red ink with the words 'Library has:' followed by a colon. On the line below give the specific volumes inclusively until a break occurs, with their corresponding years on the same line, also indenting to the outer edge. Write in pencil all volumes or years where a break occurs, which may be filled in at any time, that is, all volume numbers and years immediately preceding or following a gap. For current sets of periodicals write the last volume number and date in pencil. When a periodical has been published with more than one series of volume numbers, give first the volume numbers actually used (generally the continuous voluming of the set); and second, in curves, the designation of the special series, with its own volume numbers; and third, the years covered. (See sample cards.)

Divide the card by drawing a vertical line down the middle, beginning the line on a level with "Library has." To the right of this line write (or stamp) in red "Library lacks:" followed by a colon, and directly under it give the items lacking in exactly the same way that you noted the "Library has" items.

For finished periodicals, generally after all other notes, write: "No more published," or "Discontinued" (with date), or "Merged in" (with title of other periodical and the date), etc. In notes referring to another periodical in the library, include the call number of the periodical referred to in the title.

Use a separate card for miscellaneous or numerous notes for all periodicals except those of which the library has finished and complete sets, keeping, for other periodicals, the first card clear for the "Library has" statement.

Enter a periodical which is the organ of a society or club under its name as the main entry, with an added entry under the name of the society, except when it forms the regular proceedings or transactions of a society, in which case make the society the main entry, with an added entry under the title. (For the latter see CORPORATE ENTRIES.)

On subject cards, instead of repeating the "Library has" and "Library lacks" statements, refer to the main card for that information; e.g., say in a note "For volumes and dates contained in the library see the main card under the name of the periodical."

Following are a few reference aids for cataloging periodicals which you will find very helpful in looking up changes in titles, frequency of publication, etc.

CHAPTER XI

CYCLOPEDIAS AND DICTIONARIES

Enter cyclopedias and dictionaries under the name of the author, or under the name of the editor as author, except in those cases where the work is decidedly better known under its title, in which case enter it under the title as main entry, beginning as you would for a periodical, on the top line at the title indentation. In such case make an added entry under the editor or preferably a reference from the editor to the title. If in doubt make the main entry under the editor. If the work is well known under the publisher's name make an added entry under his name. Imprint, etc., is given for cyclopedias and dictionaries as for any ordinary book. Title and subject cards are made as usual.

CHAPTER XII

ALMANACS, YEAR-BOOKS AND DIRECTORIES

In general, catalog almanacs, year-books (or annuals), directories and other works published serially like periodicals, beginning the main entry on the top line at the second indention, with the first word of the title not an article. Omit imprint in the usual place following the title and give instead the "Library has" statement as you would give it on a periodical card, except that the words "Library has" may begin at the title indention and the "Library has" statement on the line below at the author indention instead of at the extreme left edge of the card. The "Library lacks" statement need not be given.

Such phrases as "annual issue," "5th edition," etc., are often used with the meaning of volume and are to be listed under that term. When no volume number or anything corresponding to a volume number is given, give years only.

On subject cards refer as in the case of periodicals to the main card for full information.

If you have many directories of one place I would recommend entering them under the name of the place in order to keep all directories of a certain place together in the catalog and on the shelves. In any case I would suggest assigning the Cutter number from the name of the place even though the title does not begin with that word.

Enter a directory which is not issued periodically under its compiler as author, as main entry, or, if it is published anonymously, under the first word of the title like a periodical, but omit in this case the "Library has" statement and give instead the date and volumes as for any ordinary book.

Make editor cards only in rare cases, where they seem for some good reason to be really needed.

CHAPTER XIII

SACRED BOOKS AND ANONYMOUS CLASSICS

For all sacred works and anonymous classics, use the name of the sacred book or the classic as author-heading, beginning the main entry on the top line at the author indention. For the title entry on such author card, give the title just as it reads on the title page, followed by date and volumes. There are few books that will come under this head. Of the ones you are most likely to have, the Bible, Koran, Talmud, Avesta and Vedas come under the head of sacred works; the Mabinogion, Nibelungenlied, Cid, Eddas, Federalist, Anglo-Saxon chronicle, Gudrun, Heliand, Fridthjofs saga, Mother Goose, Merlin, Domesday book, Beowulf, La Chanson de Roland, Reineke Fuchs (Reynard the Fox), Arabian nights, Gesta Romanorum, etc., are examples of the second class. In both the above mentioned classes of books, the name forms the author-heading for the entire work or any part of it. That is to say, any part of the Bible (the Old Testament, New Testament, Gospels, etc.) is entered under the word Bible as author-heading. Any edition, translation, or variation of the Arabian nights is entered under Arabian nights as author-heading, with added entries always under the translators, editors, etc., if they are important enough, or if the book is well known by their names.

Anonymous books not of the type just described are to be treated like anonymous books for which no author has been found.

CHAPTER XIV

CORPORATE ENTRIES

These include publications of all corporate bodies, such as government publications, and publications (reports, transactions, proceedings, etc.) of societies, associations, institutions, etc., which take for their main entry the name of the country, state, city, etc., or the society, association, institution, etc., responsible for the publication.

The chief points of difference between government documents and society publications are (a) the much more general need for subheads in the author-headings of government documents, (b) the liability of departments to change their names, of bureaus to change their departmental relations, and of serial publications to change their forms or titles or to be transferred from one department to another. In the case of such a change the entire series may, as with periodicals, be entered under one form with a reference from the others, or the publications appearing under each form may be catalogued under that form, with notes showing the relation to earlier and later forms. I would recommend the latter method as being the simpler.

Reports fall into two classes, (a) continuations, which receive the "Library has" treatment, and (b) finished reports, which are treated like any other finished, complete work. You can generally determine quite easily to which class a report belongs. All reports which are expected to continue indefinitely, as annual reports, etc., are of the first class, and completed reports for special investigations, etc., of the second class. Occasionally, however, reports appear which do not show whether they are to be continued or not, in which cases you must depend upon your own judgment, aided by such information as you may be able to obtain from outside sources.

Treat Continuations; e.g., transactions, proceedings, etc., except for the use of the author-heading, like periodicals, writing "Library has" on the main card, beginning at the title indentation, with the items on the line below at the author indentation, and making a reference to the main card from the subject card. Omit the "Library lacks" statement.

The titles of society publications differ sometimes from the ordinary line of titles for such publications. In this case include in the title on the card the whole or part of the name of the society or institution, in order to show the relation between the author-heading and the title; e.g., "Lectures delivered under the auspices of the society."

Subheads in corporate headings follow the main heading one half centimeter space away and are capitalized.

Title cards are rarely needed.

Instead of making individual subject cards for official publications of a department which issues many publications falling under the same general subject, make instead a single reference, in red ink, from the subject to the author; e.g.,

Agriculture, see also

United States. Agriculture, Dept. of.

File such cards at the beginning of all cards with that subject heading but following the regular "see also" reference cards referring to other subjects.

Some publications, like the "Farmers' bulletin" and the "Experiment station record," are so well known by their titles that it is better to make the main entry under the title, with a general secondary entry under the department or bureau issuing the publication.

Make references and added entries very freely if there is the slightest uncertainty as to the form under which a book will be sought in the catalog.

Always make references from the name of a department to any of its bureaus under which works have been entered, and in some cases from the name of the department or bureau without the name of the country; e.g.,

United States. Interior dept. Bureau of education, see

United States. Education, Bureau of.

Post-office department, see

United States. Post-office dept.

Do not, as a general thing, make editor or compiler cards for individuals connected with the work of a department or bureau unless they are well known.

In case an individual has become very well known as the chief of a department, refer from his name to the official heading; e.g.,

Harris, W. T. see also

United States. Education, Bureau of.

Treat analytics for completed publications as you would ordinary analytics.

If the report of a department or official is regularly published with that of another department or official, treat the first in the volumes as the main author, and make author analytics or references for the second. If the analytic form is used, the items inside the parentheses would consist merely of author and title, no account being taken of dates and volume numbers; e.g.,

- | | |
|------------|--|
| 336 | Massachusetts. Auditor's office. |
| M41 | Annual report of the auditor. (see Massachusetts. Finance dept. Annual report of the treasurer.) |
| | Library has: |
| | no. 1, 1904 |
| | no. 3, 1906 |

If you have a "sheep set," arrange it according to "serial nos.," analyzing anything important enough to be brought out. If possible have the new "Checklist of U. S. public documents, 1789-1909." It is invaluable. If your set is very incomplete, or you do not care to give shelf room to a relatively complete one, then break it up and classify and catalog the volumes you keep in specific manner as you would any other books.

Enter annual reports and other publications in which the personal author is not to be noticed under the departments or bureaus directly responsible for them, inverting the name where necessary to bring out the important word, e. g.,

United States. State dept. (not Dept. of state).

United States. Education, Bureau of, (not United States. Interior dept. Bureau of education).

Numbered publications such as bulletins, having personal authors, enter under the personal name, using the government series in a note, like an ordinary series, and make a series entry for the government series. For example, for Warman, P. C. Catalogue and index of the publications of the United States Geological survey. Bulletin of the U. S. Geological survey, no. 177.

- | | |
|------------|--|
| 016 | Warman, P. C. |
| W27 | Catalogue and index of the publications of the United States Geological survey, 1880-1901. 1901. (Bulletin of the U. S. Geological survey, no. 177.) |
| | Includes: Bulletin no. 215: Catalogue and index of the publications of the . . . survey, 1901-1903. |

United States. Geological survey.

Bulletin.

016 no. 177, Warman. Catalogue and index of the United W27 States Geological survey, 1880-1901. 1901.

If the government merely publishes the book, enter under the personal author, making an arbitrary form of series card for the government, manufacturing a title when necessary; e. g.,

538 Hazard, D. L.

H42 Directions for magnetic measurements. 1911.
 (United States. Coast and geodetic survey.)

United States. Coast and geodetic survey.

[Publications.]

538 Hazard. Direction for magnetic measurements.
H42 1911.

But when the government instigates the investigation, and the book is not one of a numbered series, make the main entry under the government, giving the personal author a "full card," showing the government entry in a series note after the date; e.g., (United States. Education, Bureau of).

Society publications may be treated in the same way, except that names of societies should never be inverted, and a society committee should be kept under the society, as "Society for the promotion of engineering education. Committee on the teaching of mathematics to students of engineering."

Treat local conferences which are held annually, biennially, etc., as periodicals (omitting the "Library lacks" statement, however), giving data all on one card.

CHAPTER XV

EDITORS, TRANSLATORS, ILLUSTRATORS, COMPILERS AS ADDED OR SECONDARY ENTRIES

Such entries will rarely be needed by a small library, for even though the editor, etc., may be a famous writer, it is not usually as the editor of the work in question that he is so well known. Therefore, unless a library has unlimited time, material and catalogue case space at its disposal, I would not recommend the making of editor or compiler or translator cards except in rare instances where they seem to the librarian to be absolutely necessary, as may happen in the case of works by Classic and Oriental writers and for anonymous books, etc., or in case a library considers it desirable to represent all phases of an author's work under his name in the catalog. Illustrator cards should only be made when the illustrator is really prominent and well known and his illustrations likely to be called for by readers; for example, Charles Dana Gibson, Howard Chandler Christy, Maxfield Parrish, Jessie Wilcox Smith, A. B. Frost, Walter Crane, Dulac, Cruikshank, and others equally important. When the illustrations in a book are more important than the text, make the illustrator or designer the main entry. In such case always make an added or secondary entry under the writer of the text. As main entries, editors, etc., are treated exactly like authors, with the abbreviations "ed.," "tr.," "illus.," "comp.," after their names.

If the editor, translator, etc., is important enough in himself, or if the class of book seems to demand it (as would be the case in works by Classic or Oriental writers), incorporate the name of the editor, translator, etc., in the title. Do not invert the name, but make it read as part of the title of the book, preceded by a semicolon, and the phrase "ed. by," "trans. by," "illus. by," as the case may be. Do not in such case alter the language or wording of the title page; e.g., if it is so stated on the title page write "trans. from the Italian by"; "done into English by"; "after the Russian by," etc., etc.

On the title card omit all mention of the editor, translator, etc., but repeat the title on the subject card exactly as it was given on the main card, including mention of the editor, translator, etc.

If the same work has undergone many editions or translations, etc., make one title reference for all editions or translations instead of a title card for each; e.g., instead of making a title card or entry for each edition of Shakespeare's Hamlet, or a title card for each edition and translation of Homer's Odyssey, which would necessitate giving the editor or translator on each title card in order to differentiate, make title references which would read respectively

Hamlet, see
Shakespeare, William.

Odyssey, see
Homer.

each title referring to its author, under which entry full information would be found concerning the various editions or translations of the work in the library. Omit the call number on all reference cards.

When making the Editor, Translator, etc. card, begin the entry under the editor, translator, or illustrator on the top line at the second or title indention, giving his name with the same fullness as you would the author, adding one centimeter after the last forename or title the abbreviation "ed.", "tr.", "illus.", as the case may be. If more than one line is required keep all lines at the second or inner indention. On the line below give the author, using his surname only, beginning at the author indention. Below the author entry give the title of the book, omitting a repetition of the name in the heading, followed one centimeter space thereafter by the imprint date and the number of volumes as they are usually given on title cards.

In case of two or more editors, translators, or illustrators for one book, make a separate card for each editor, translator, or illustrator without reference to the others. They should not be treated like joint authors.

When the same person has edited or translated many works by the same author, make an editor or translator reference to the author, instead of a separate added entry under the editor or translator for each work; e.g.,

CHAPTER XVI

ANALYTICS AND INDEPENDENTS

The subject of analytics involves the three ordinary types of cards,—author, subject and title, which we have considered. Make an author analytic when part of a book is written by some person not the author of the main part of the book, or when two or more works of some author who has written a great number of books are bound together, especially if they have at any time been published separately. In both these cases the included portion of the book, if there were no analytic, would be thrown quite out of its alphabetic place in filing. For example, if you have Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield and Johnson's Rasselas bound in one book, make an author analytic for Johnson, as no one would dream of looking under Goldsmith for him. In like manner, if you have Dickens' David Copperfield and Oliver Twist in one work, make your author analytic for Oliver Twist, as the reader will not think of turning back to him under David Copperfield expecting to find Oliver Twist. If, however, you have two works bound in one, both by an author not well known or by one under whose name the library is likely to have so few entries that the reader will look them through, the one author card will suffice so long as you indicate on that card, either in a note or contents, the fact that something else is contained in the book. I would suggest that in all cases you do so indicate on the main card the titles and authors of any separate matter included in the book. Do not, as a rule, make author analytics for the collected works of an author. Decide each case on its individual merits.

Make a title analytic in all cases where it seems desirable, for all works likely to be looked for under their individual titles, where, in fact, you would make a regular title card were that part of the book published as a separate work or bound separately. Title analytics are made most often for fiction, drama and essays.

Make a subject analytic in all cases where the subject heading for the main part of the book does not cover the analyzed part, if the material is of the slightest importance to the library. When it does so cover it, no separate subject analytic need be made provided the separate matter included in the book is noted also on the main subject card and that the author of the analytic is the same as the author of the main part of the book. Even so, in the latter case the separate subject analytic need not be made unless there are many cards under that subject in the catalog and the author of the analytic may be looked for under that subject. If there is the slightest doubt, however, I should recommend making the separate subject analytic.

For short stories, however, I should not advise making analytics, unless the stories are known under their separate titles or have been published separately, either in magazines or in book form, or unless they are by different authors. For example, the short stories contained in Booth Tarkington's work, "In the Arena," have all appeared under their separate titles in McClure's magazine; consequently title analytics would be of value in this case, and are in fact really necessary.

The part to be analyzed is sometimes paged continuously with the rest of the book; sometimes it consists of a separate group of pages without a separate title page and sometimes of a separate group of pages with a distinct title page of its own. It may be by the same author as the main part of the book or by a different author or authors, or it may be anonymous.

Begin the main card for a work requiring analytics as you would any main card, with the author of the first part of the book on the top line at the outer indentation. On the line below give the title of the first part of the book only, followed by the imprint as it is generally given on the main card. If it happens to be a book of short stories or essays, etc., and the title is the title of the first story or essay and not a title covering the entire contents of the book, add after the title in brackets [and other stories] or [and other essays], and under Contents: give the various items in the book, including the first mentioned.

If the parts to be analyzed have distinct titles of their own, whether these parts are by the same author as the main part of the book or by different authors, or anonymous, and it does not seem feasible to bring them out in Contents (as when the title does not seem sufficiently inclusive) as shown above, leave one line blank after the main title and imprint and beginning at the title indentation write the word "Includes": followed by a colon. On the same line continue and enumerate the titles of the parts to be analyzed, separating the items by semicolons. Carry out the second and succeeding lines to the author indentation as you would for a note. If various parts have been written by different authors, or if one or more has been written by the same author as that of the main part of the book and another or others by different authors, add these authors to the titles in each case preceded by a comma and the word "by" and the author with the initials of his forenames only and not inverted. If any of the parts are anonymous titles add the word "[anon.]" in brackets after such titles so that it will not be thought they are written by the main author or the author of the preceding analytic.

Title and subject cards are made as usual for the first part of the book. On the title card make no mention of the analytic parts. On the subject card repeat the Contents: or Includes: as they appear on the main card, if they would naturally fall under the same subject heading. If not omit them, unless the author of the analytic is well known and likely to be looked for under the subject and is different from the author of the main part of the book, in which case it would be better to make a separate subject analytic card for him even though that would necessitate a duplication of the subject heading under which the main part of the book had already appeared.

On the back of the main card trace all analytics made. If, however, there are too many entries to be indicated, trace for the author analytics only on the back of the main card, and on the back of each author analytic card trace the additional entries for that particular part. If there is no author analytic card all the tracing will have to be done on the main card. Indicate the fact in the tracing that the entries are analytics, preferably by writing after each "anal."

Title

AUTHOR ANALYTIC CARD

When making the author analytic begin as you would for any main card, at the author indention with the author's name. In the title place give the title of that part of the book for which the analytic is being made, taking it from the separate title page if there is one, and if not, from the running title or caption title or chapter heading of that part or from the table of contents. When, instead of making a separate author analytic for each title of consecutive chapters in the same book, (all by the same author), it would seem better to give them all on one card, do so, giving the titles one after another separated by semicolons. If the part analyzed is separately paged with a different imprint date, add this date after the title. If not give no imprint whatever, but in curves, one centimeter after the title, refer to the main author and title, the date, and the volume and inclusive pagination in which the part analyzed is to be found; e.g., begin by writing "in" followed by the main author, inverted, exactly as he appears on the main card. One-half centimeter after this give the main title briefly, one-half centimeter thereafter the imprint date, and one centimeter after the date the volume in which the part is to be found and the inclusive pages. When an analytic is in more than one volume, give both volume numbers followed by the paging in each, or the volume number only if it takes the whole volume.

If the author of the analytic is the same as the author of the main part of the book, do not repeat his name in the curves but write instead the possessive pronoun "his" or "her," as the case may be, "their" if they are joint authors, or "its" in the case of a society, etc. If the main part of the book is anonymous refer merely to the title. The only exception I should make to this would be for an analytic entry for individual biography, where the use of the possessive pronoun might be ambiguous and it is better to repeat the author's name in the curves. If the main entry referred to is an editor or compiler, add the abbreviation "ed." or "comp." after his name as on his own card.

If an analytic consists of chapters which are not consecutive, and the titles are all given on one card, give inclusive pagination one centimeter after each title or titles to which it applies, and omit the paging inside the curves. In such cases it is best to write the reference to the main work in parentheses on a separate line directly below the last item of the analytic, beginning at the title indention but going back to the author indention if it runs over the line. If the reference is written on the same line with the last item, it looks as though it belonged to that item only. Repeat the Call number in its usual place on all analytic cards.

TITLE ANALYTIC CARD

When making the title analytic write the title of the part to be brought out on the top line, beginning at the title indention. Give the date as you would on a regular title card only when the analytic has separate paging and a distinct title page. Otherwise omit it. On the line below give the surname of the author of the analytic, and on the same line, one centimeter thereafter, repeat in curves the reference to the main part of the book exactly as it appears on the author analytic card.

SUBJECT ANALYTIC CARD

Begin the subject analytic by writing the subject heading of the analyzed part in red ink on the top line, beginning at the second indention as for a regular subject card. Leave one line blank and give the surname of the author of the analytic and on the line below the title of the analytic followed by the information in curves repeated exactly as it appears on the author analytic card.

Sometimes, on the subject analytic card, instead of giving a distinct title for the part to be brought out it seems more desirable to give instead the title of the main part of the book, if that indicates sufficiently the contents of the part to be analyzed. In this case omit the curves and the reference to the main work within the curves, but after the title given alone with the date following add the volume number and the inclusive pagination. This may happen when the part of the work to be analyzed either has no separate title, or has too many chapter titles, or has a separate title which is practically a part of the main title.

I would not, however, recommend this form of subject analytic, if the author of the analytic is different from the author of the book as a whole, or if the analytic has a distinct title which gives desirable information not given by the main title of the book.

If Library of Congress printed catalog cards are used, write the author of the analytic or the title or the subject in the space above the top line printed entry, beginning (even the author in this case) at the title indention, with the word "see" one centimeter space after, and underline the item for which the entry was made either in the title or contents if given. Or (and I should recommend this method, if the blank space at the top of the printed card will allow it) instead of underlining the item as just suggested, after the word "see" refer to the volume in which the item is contained (if the work is in more than one volume) and to the pages in that volume, or to the latter only if the work is in one volume, and after that write the word "in."

INDEPENDENTS

Books or pamphlets (more often the latter) published independently and afterwards bound together, sometimes by the publisher, sometimes by the library, are usually spoken of as "Independents," but are to be treated exactly like analytics with separate title pages, except that on the analytic cards (author, title, or subject) in the curves, the words "bound with" are substituted for the "in."

On the main card for the first story, work or pamphlet so bound, give in Contents or Includes the titles, with their authors, of the other works bound with it if not too numerous. If too numerous to mention thus, add a note stating "Other pamphlets, or stories—whatever it may happen to be—by the same (or, by different) authors bound with this"; or, after the title of the first add in brackets "[and other pamphlets by the same (or, by different) authors]." The note is preferable.

CHAPTER XVII

SERIES

When a book is one of a series important enough to be noted, add the series note in curves one centimeter after the imprint on the main and subject cards. It need not be given on the title, editor or other secondary cards. Omit the word "series" if the name of the series is complete without it, even though it is so given in the book; e.g., (International education series.) but (American statesmen.) As a rule omit the name of the publisher in the series; e.g., (Riverside literature series.) not (Houghton's Riverside literature series.)

Do not confuse the edition note with the series note, but when the designation of an edition is in the nature of a series give it in a series note if you consider it important enough to give at all; e.g., (Riverside edition.) (Household edition.) etc.

The editor of a series, even though given in the book, should be omitted from the series note, except in the very rare cases where the series is best known by the editor's name. In every other respect the form of the name for a series in the series note should correspond to the heading used on the series card. Do not abbreviate the word "series."

Mention of the series is not always made on the main title page of the book, even when it is an important or well-known one, so a careful search is usually necessary. It may be noted on the half title page, at the head of the advertising page, on the cover or in some other place selected by the publisher.

377	Adler, Felix.
A23	Moral instruction of children. 1902c1892. (International education series, v. 21.)

While the series note may be used for all series if desired, make the series card only for the more important series, which you will find are generally limited to some specific subject, as their names indicate; e.g., International scientific series; International education series; American statesmen; English statesmen; Story of the nations; Eclectic school readings; English men of letters; American commonwealths; etc., etc. Do not ordinarily make series cards for publishers' miscellaneous series, such as Everyman's library, or for unimportant or cheap series.

When making the series card, begin on the top line, at the outer or author indention, with the name of the series, whether it has an editor or not. In the former case include the editor in the heading, without inversion and with secondary fullness, preceded by a semicolon and "ed. by." For very brief cataloging omit mention of the editor even on the series card. If the heading requires more than one line begin the second and succeeding lines at the title indention.

If there are two or three editors of a series include all in the heading, but if there are more than three give the first mentioned only followed by the phrase "and others." Make a reference from each editor, separately and independently, to the series. If different editors have edited the series at different times, give them both on the series card as though editing at the same time, or omit altogether if unimportant. Make, however, the usual reference.

On the line below begin the surname of the author of the first book to be entered, at the title indention, and one centimeter thereafter, on the same line, give the title in brief. One centimeter after that the imprint date (or its substitute as given on short entry cards) and one centimeter after that the number of volumes if there is more than one. Enter the call number in the left margin opposite each entry.

Enter as many separate works in the series on the same card as you have space for. Additional or extension cards may be used if required, according to directions already given for the use of such cards in Contents, etc.

The entry for each book on the series card consists of its call number, the author's surname, a brief title, the imprint date or its substitute as it is given on the title card, and the number of volumes if there is more than one. This necessitates two lines or more for each entry for all works of non-fiction, and one line, or more if needed, for all works of fiction, the latter requiring no class number or no call number at all.

If the volumes of a series are numbered, the volume numbers may, if desired, be included at the end of the series note, preceded by a comma, and on the series card they should be given in the usual place for volume numbers (between the two vertical lines, or between the author and title indention), and the title of the books in the series on the series card would in such case be arranged numerically instead of alphabetically. This need not be done, however, except when necessary to show some particular order in which the books should be read, as, for example, when the volumes of a history series come in consecutive or chronological order, etc.

If the volumes of a series are not numbered, arrange the entries alphabetically by authors, or, in case the series is one of individual biographies, alphabetically by biographees, as far as possible. If the volumes are numbered, and it is found desirable, or deemed necessary (as would be the case of books published in chronological order) arrange the entries numerically by the volume numbers. This rule cannot in either case be arbitrarily adhered to, as additional volumes are added to the series card from time to time in the order in which they are added to the library, and an alphabetical or numerical arrangement therefore would necessitate frequent rewriting of the series card.

The series card is the only card on which a secondary entry begins at the author indention and an author entry at the title indention.

Treat the remaining volumes in the series in the same way, allowing two lines, (or more if needed) for each, because of the call number except for works of fiction when one line will suffice unless the entry requires the extra line.

SERIES BY ONE AUTHOR

When all the books of a series are by one author, it is better to make a series card under the name of the author instead of the main card under his name for each individual book.

When making such a card begin with the author's name as usual on the top line at the author indention. On the line below, beginning at the title indention, give the name of the series as though it were the title of a single book, going back to the author indention if the title requires more than one line. On the line below that, beginning at the title indention, enter the first book in the series, followed by the date and number of volumes as they are usually given on the title card. Add the remainder of the books in the series in the same way, keeping all entries at the second indention, and allowing the allotted number of lines for each volume. The entries on this series card are given exactly as on a regular series card except that the author, being given in the heading, is not repeated for each individual book. Spacing need not be left for volumes missing in a series except for a series by a single author, particularly in a series of fiction, where the works should be read consecutively. In such case space should be left for any volumes which the library lacks that they may be added in their proper places when received, and titles of such series should be entered in sequence.

An exception should be made to the general rule that cross references need not be traced on the main card. Cross references from the editor to the series or from the series title to the author should be traced.

If the author of the book and the editor of the series are the same, make the series card as usual but omit the reference from the editor to the series, and omit the repetition of the author in the contents on the series card. His name in the heading will suffice.

CHAPTER XVIII

PARTIAL AND CHANGED TITLES

For books published or translated under different titles or well known under certain parts of the regular title (the running-title, the binder's title, the half-title, the cover title, the sub-title, etc.) make the main or author card as usual, giving the title as it appears on the title page, but adding a note, stating that the book has been published or translated under a different title. Follow the same usage if the catch or binder's title is not part of the title on the title-page, whenever in fact the special title is not actually a partial title, saying "Same book pub. under title..." or "Same book trans. under title..."; "Binder's title reads...", etc. Make the title card as usual if the book calls for such a card, but in addition (unless a subject entry will take its place) make an added title card or cards for the changed or partial title under which the book is known; e.g., make a title card beginning on the top line at the title indentation with the special title to be brought out (partial title, changed title, etc.), but omit date and volumes. On the line below give the author's surname, beginning at the outer indentation. On the line below the author give the title of the book as it appears on the main card, followed by the date and number of volumes as they usually appear on the title card. Write the call number in its usual place. If the library possesses only one of the titles, add to the partial title card the word "see" one centimeter after the title given as the top line entry on this card. On subject cards repeat the note given on the main card.

If the library possesses the same book under different titles catalog each separately, making a main card for each, with an explanatory note, assigning a different call number to each. In recent years there have been many examples of books published in America and in England with differing titles for the American and English editions.

In this case, if the library possesses both editions, make a regular title card for each edition instead of a partial or changed title card, and, though notes do not usually appear on title cards, repeat on each title card the note as given on the main card for that edition.

If an author has written many books, and consequently there are many author cards under his name in the catalog, there is a corresponding chance of not finding a book which has been published under more than one title. As a rule do not make a main card under the changed title unless you have the work in the library. If, however, there is the possibility of the book being remembered or sought for under the author, and there are many cards in the catalog under his name, I recommend making a main entry reference for the changed title so that it will appear in its alphabetic place under the author.

On the top line at the author indention give the author as usual, with secondary fullness. On the line below, at the inner indention, the changed title (the one not in the library), followed by a comma and one centimeter thereafter the word "see." On the line below that repeat the author entry as it was given above and on the line below that the title as it appears on the main card (the one you have in your library) with the date and the number of volumes as they usually appear on a main card and with the call number of the work in the library in its customary place.

On subject cards for books with changed or partial titles, etc., repeat the note given on the main card.

Trace all partial titles, etc., under which added entries are made on the back of the main card, specifying the initial word of the entry when the catch phrase is not perfectly obvious.

CHAPTER XIX

COLLECTIVE BIOGRAPHY.—FAMILY BIOGRAPHY AND GENEALOGY.—INDIVIDUAL BIOGRAPHY, INCLUDING AUTOBIOGRAPHY

Treat works of collective biography exactly as you would any other book, except that contents are invariably given unless the items are too numerous. A subject analytic entry is generally made under the name of each biographee, in libraries with small or moderate collections, and under the more important ones, if treated at sufficient length to warrant it, in the larger libraries. For such entries see "Analytics," under which head further details are given.

The subject heading "Biography" may be used for works of a general character. But biographies which treat collectively of specific classes of people should be placed under specific headings; e.g., Authors, Engineers, Artists, Musicians, Merchants, Actors, Lawyers, Inventors, etc., etc.

FOR GENEALOGICAL WORKS OR FAMILY BIOGRAPHIES

Make the main card as usual, and follow directions already given for secondary entries under title, editor, translator, etc.

The subject entry for the genealogy or biography of a special family should consist of the name of that family in the heading followed by the word "family;" e.g.,

Thompson family.

If the particular work in hand traces descent from one certain ancestor or branch of the family more specifically, make the heading read specifically, and add the dates of birth and death if needed, as you would for individual biography; e.g.,

Thompson, A. J. 1799-1861, family.

INDIVIDUAL BIOGRAPHY (INCLUDING AUTOBIOGRAPHY)

Autobiography is individual biography, but differs from the usual individual biography in having the same name or entry for author as for subject. For autobiography in a dictionary catalog, the author card may be dispensed with if desired when the title reads "Autobiography," or "Life by himself" or similarly. If, however, the title is a striking one or one which does not sufficiently indicate the fact that the work is autobiographical, make the author card as well as the subject card.

Ordinarily no title card need be made for individual biography, except for anonymous biographies (for which see directions for "Anonymous Books") or for striking titles or for books well known under their titles.

Make the author card as usual, according to directions already given.

Make, for all individual biography, a subject card under the name of the biographee; e.g.,

On the subject card begin on the top line at the title indention, in red ink, with the names of the biographee with secondary fullness, inverted, and one centimeter after his name, his dates of birth and death if you think there is need for them. I don't, for a small library. In giving these dates avoid repetition of the century. Should the heading require more than one line keep all at the second indention.

Leave one line blank after the heading as on other subject cards, and on the following line, beginning at the outer indention, give the author's surname. On the line below give the title, dates, and number of volumes as they are usually given on subject cards; e.g.,

CHAPTER XX

ADDED EDITIONS

Instead of making a complete set of new cards (author, title, subject, etc.) for an added edition of a work already in the library, yet not an exact duplicate of it, and therefore necessitating as a rule a new call number, add the entry of the last acquired edition on the cards already in the catalogue. Copies of the same book which differ only in non-essentials, which have not been altered so far as the text is concerned, do not come under this head. Such books may be considered duplicates and treated as such. I would not recommend that a mere reprint of a work, corresponding exactly to the original, subject to unimportant differences, such as size, publisher or imprint date, be treated as an added edition. The same work in different volumes would, however, have to be considered an added edition even though the text in both editions corresponded exactly. For fiction, unless the library has a special reason or there is a special demand on the part of the public for bringing out the difference in translation of books translated into the English language, I recommend taking no notice of such difference but treat all translations of the same work in the same number of volumes as duplicates.

When an edition is to be added to the main card for another edition already in the library, leave one line blank after the last written line on that card and indicate the repetition of the author's name by a long dash, about half an inch long, beginning at the author indentation and on ruled cards a little above the ruled line. One centimeter after this, on the same line, indicate by another dash, half an inch long, (or the word "Same") the title so far as it agrees with the title of the previous edition above, and add directly after the second dash the rest of the title of the added edition from the point where it began to differ from that of the entry above if it seems important enough to do so. Follow this with the date, the number of volumes and series note of the newly added edition as on any main card and in the left margin opposite the added entry write its call number.

On the subject card make the entry in exactly the same way. On the title card follow the directions just given, except that on this card you need not give the additional or changed part of the title,—the two dashes, date and number of volumes (as they usually appear on a title card) being all that is necessary.

If when adding the second or subsequent edition some difference in title would make it seem clearer and more desirable to give that first on the card and the one already in second, rewrite the cards to conform. When different editions are being cataloged at the same time give the later edition the first place on the card, if the title of that edition is shorter than that of the earlier one, regardless of the date. Be sure to indicate by some distinguishing mark (difference in length of title, in number of volumes, in date, if necessary in number of edition [e.g., Ed. 5, or Ed. rev. & enl., etc.]) the difference in the various editions added. Give notes with each entry when necessary.

If several added editions are entered on one card leave one line blank between entries.

On the series card follow the general rule of added editions, unless entries for other works in the series follow the original entry for the work in question, in which case make the entry for the added edition an entirely new entry as you would for any work to be added to the series card.

CHAPTER XXI

SUPPLEMENTS AND CONTINUATIONS, KEYS AND INDEXES

Treat supplements and continuations, keys and indexes, as you would added editions, on the card of the original work to which it belongs. Use the dash to indicate the author entry and one centimeter after it on the same line give the title and imprint of the supplement, etc. itself as it is usually given.

A continuation which is in the form of an independent work under another author should be cataloged independently, with the main entry under its own author and a reference to the original. On the cards for the original a reference should be made to the continuation.

If there is an editor of the continuation and it might be looked for under his name, make an added entry under the editor or compiler.

Enter a general index as a rule under its compiler as main entry, except where it is much better known under its title, in which case enter it like a periodical, beginning the main entry on the top line at the second indentation.

CHAPTER XXII

MISCELLANEOUS POINTS NOT ALREADY COVERED

It may sometimes seem desirable because of local interest or for some other reason to make an added entry for a society before (not by) which an address has been delivered. If so, make such an entry in the form of a series card, giving the name of the society as the author of the series and the word Addresses as the title, with the separate addresses following in regular series form; e.g.,

325	Latrobe, J. H. B.
L36	Maryland in Liberia; a history of the colony planted . . . at Cape Palmas . . . 1833-1853; a paper read before the Maryland historical society, March 9, 1885. 1885.

	Maryland. Historical society. Addresses.
325	Latrobe. Maryland in Liberia. 1885.
L36

Similar cards may be made for society publications, bulletins, etc., when they are cataloged as separate works instead of as sets. For such works the title "Publications" is the best one to use; e.g.,

818	Irving, Washington.
172	Alhambra. 1905.
	Published by the Collegiate society of New York.

	New York (City). Collegiate society.
	[Publications.]
818	Irving. Alhambra. 1905.
172
B	— Life of Washington. 1905. 5v.
W318Iv

For extracts or collections from magazines, if there is no regular editor or compiler and the name of the periodical seems best for the main entry, enter them under the name of the periodical as author, beginning on the top line at the author indentation, not at the title indentation as you would for a regular periodical card; e.g.,

917.5	St. Nicholas.
S14	Southern stories, retold from St. Nicholas.
	1907 c1889-1907.

917.5	Southern states of the U. S.
S14
	St. Nicholas.
	Southern stories, retold from St. Nicholas.
	1907 c1889-1907.

917.5	Southern stories. 1907.
S14	St. Nicholas.

Treat a single essay or article reprinted from a larger work (from a periodical or government document, society transactions, or a collection of essays, etc.) or a selection (a chapter, etc., with a specific title) from the published work of an author as you would any book, but state the fact of its being a reprint in a note on the main and subject cards; e.g.,

158 James, William.
J29 Habit. 1914c1890.

A chapter reprinted from his "Psychology."

158 Habit.
J29
 James.
 Habit., 1914c1890.

A chapter reprinted from his "Psychology."

If a book requires a criticism or bibliography card, make such cards exactly as you would subject cards for individual biography or any other subject. I would for these two kinds of cards suggest getting the yellow cards (for criticism) and the blue cards (for bibliography) which are sold by the Library Bureau, and which have "For criticism of," "For bibliography of" printed at the extreme top of the card to the left. Order the unruled kind if you use the typewriter. If you use these cards add the word "see" one centimeter after your top line entry in order to make the phrasing grammatical. If a single work of an author is criticized, add the title of that work in the subject heading, beginning both author and title at the inner indention in red ink.

If the bibliography or criticism is not the whole book but a certain part of the book (an extra chapter, an appendix, etc.) make a regular subject analytical on the colored cards under the title of the bibliography or criticism.

File a criticism card of a specific work of an author directly after the work itself. File other criticism cards and bibliography cards after all other cards by and about the person or after other works on that subject.

Under the headings Bibliography and Criticism, respectively, make a general cross reference on white cards in red ink as follows:

Bibliography. For the bibliography of any person or subject see blue cards under the name of that person or subject.

Criticism. For the criticism of any author or work of an author see yellow cards under the name of that author.

Treat a parody as you would the criticism of an individual work.

When the authorship of a book is doubtful, but is attributed to a certain author, enter it under his name and add the phrase one centimeter thereafter, "attributed author," but file it in the catalog in its alphabetic place with the rest of that author's works, ignoring in the arrangement the phrase "attributed author."

When a book has been entered under a wrong author on seemingly good authority, recatalog it under the correct name when the true authorship has been discovered, with a note (on all cards in this case if desired) stating "This book wrongly ascribed to ——." For the erroneous author make an author reference card as you would make an author reference card for a changed title; e.g.,

Marsh-Caldwell, Mrs. Anne (Caldwell), attributed author.

Make the main entry for pictures or statuary under the name of the artist, and make subject cards under the name of the subject of the picture or statuary. Add a note on main and subject cards stating that it is a picture, a photograph, a piece of statuary, etc. if the title does not sufficiently indicate it.

When an individual, a society, or a government department, etc., has some kind of an author connection with a book important enough to be brought out but not really the main author, nor such as can be readily defined by a single word such as editor, translator, etc., make a card under this author as you would make one for an added entry under an editor or translator, except that no term corresponding to editor or translator is used in the heading. If there are two or more of such entries to be made, make each independently as you would make cards for joint editors as secondary entries. Individuals on whose writings another work is based, epitomes, adaptations, etc., or societies or departments to which a report is made or which authorizes a publication come under this head.

For a Revision, an Epitome, an Abridgment or Adaptation make the main entry under the name of the original author, with an added author card, indented like a secondary entry, under the reviser, epitomiser, etc., unless the work has become substantially a new work, as is usually the case with dramatizations of works, legends and the like, or novelizations of plays, etc., in which case make the main entry under the reviser, epitomiser, abridger, adapter or playwright as author, with a note stating the facts, if they are not given in the title. In this case make an added author card or an author reference under the name of the original author.

CHAPTER XXIII

ARRANGEMENT

Having considered at length the subject of the various types of cards, their form, content, and the like, we now come to the subject of the arrangement of the cards when made.

File all cards carefully in your catalog, noting any inconsistency by the way. A carelessly alphabetized catalog is not of much use, as the cards wrongly filed and thus hidden will do you no more good than if they were not there; and the result will be that you will tell the borrower or he will conclude for himself that the particular book or subject he wants is not contained in your library. File alphabetically, as that term is understood by the majority of your borrowers, not in a way to necessitate having Cutter's Rules continually at your elbow unless you find that it is simpler for you to file according to these rules and that you can make your public understand them, to some extent at least. Remember the reader has no rules to refer to, and would not use them if he had. In all this I am referring to popular circulating libraries, not to scholarly libraries, where presumably no ignorance exists and nothing is too abstruse for the user. The average reader searching for a book entitled Marie in the following lists will not dream of looking further than the second entry, as shown in Arrangement 2. He will not expect to find Marie six cards further along, where it would be if your cards were alphabetized strictly according to Cutter's Rules, as in Arrangement 1. How much simpler it is for the user if the entries are marshalled alphabetically as in Arrangement 2, and yet how confusing even then to one unused to consulting a catalog frequently. It sounds simple and easy to say "file in strict alphabetical order," but the longer you live and the larger your catalog grows the greater will become the problem as to what is meant by "strict alphabetical order." With the many inversions, etc., in headings two people doing the same work daily will oft find themselves puzzled and differing in opinion. The court of appeal, when the question is brought to her may disagree with both yet be unable to make satisfactorily clear the reason for her decision. Consider your public in this as in all else. Stretch your rules, stretch your mind and the policy of your library too, when doing so is for the good of your constituency. Have a reason for doing everything, so that if you are asked without warning "Why do you do thus and so?" you may be able clearly, concisely and intelligently to satisfy the inquiring mind of your trustee, your reader or your visitor. Following are several sample lists of filing which may assist you in this very important part of the work.

In them I have endeavored to arrange names and headings which often prove puzzling to the most expert. For your comfort let me add that years of experience in this as in the assignment of subject headings and cross-references will not insure perfection and do not presuppose absolute knowledge or freedom from error—in judgment if nothing else. The lists are intended to be suggestions more than anything else.

CHAPTER XXIV

PRACTICAL HINTS NOT STRICTLY CONFINED TO CATALOGING

Read at least your two American organs of the library profession "The Library Journal," and "Public Libraries" religiously each month. You will be well repaid for the outlay of money and time.

Get the unabridged edition of the Dewey Decimal classification, rather than the abridged edition if you can possibly afford to do so. You will be amply repaid for the extra expense. The latest edition, published in 1913 is preferable mainly because of its index, which is more up to date in the matter of new terms and expressions to fit new subjects of recent interest than is the body of the book itself. If you have an earlier edition, the Index may be purchased separately, for $3.25.

Get the Library of Congress printed catalog cards for your books whenever possible. They cost so little in time as well as money and the result will more than repay you for any little inconvenience in sending and waiting. Make out a list of the books for which you want cards, giving the Author, Title, Date and Edition of the book in each case and specifying the number of cards wanted for each book. Unless you care to put temporary cards in your catalog, or leave the books unrecorded for some time in the catalog, I would suggest that you instruct the Library of Congress to send at once what cards were ready and cancel the order for the remaining books, and write or typewrite those cards yourself. It is simpler than trying to keep track of what cards are still to come and what books still uncataloged. I suggest a list instead of a slip for each book merely because it is less likely to get lost, though the Library of Congress manages so carefully that it is rarely, almost never, that an order or part of an order is lost. If you prefer to send the order for cards when you send out your order for books (which will insure the receipt of the cards often before the arrival of the books) follow the same plan, but as you will not be able to state with certainty the number of cards required for each book, leave that to the judgment of the Card Section of the Library of Congress, instructing them to send for each book listed as many cards as they themselves would make. Should you afterwards find that not enough have been sent in any instance either write the missing cards yourself or send another order. I would not recommend the latter except in cases where many extra cards, for analyticals for instance, are needed. By applying to the Card Section of the Library of Congress, you may obtain "franks" which you can paste on unstamped envelopes and so save postage when ordering cards. For more detailed information regarding these printed cards and more specific directions as to ordering, etc., send to the Library of Congress for the newly published edition of the Handbook. When using the printed cards I would suggest making the printed heading, the name heading on the top line, agree with any written or typewritten cards you may already have in the catalog by the same author, so as to avoid confusion in filing. Otherwise I would not make any changes in the printed cards, even though they do not agree in fullness with the rest of the catalog. The result is always so messy if too much is crossed out or erased. Ignore such difference in filing, making sure that all books by the same author are filed together under his name. The printed cards may also be used for Shelf List cards though I should not recommend them strongly, as there is often so much printed matter on the card that it is difficult to find a clear space sufficiently large to receive several accession numbers so that they can be easily read.

For book numbers use the Cutter-Sanborn Author tables, numbering by the initial letter of the author's surname in all cases except that of individual biography, when you should use the initial letter of the subject's surname as the beginning of the book number. Use the three figures derived from the tables for fiction (if you use any book numbers at all for this class, which I do not recommend) and individual biography, and the first two figures for non-fiction. For fiction I would suggest that you use neither class nor book number. Arrange the books in this class on the shelves alphabetically by authors, and by title under each author, and charge them by the accession number. For juvenile fiction a J may be used in place of a class number to differentiate it from adult fiction. Here also no book number need be used. For individual biography B may be used. This letter used in place of the class number will bring all biographies into one class, arranged in one alphabet in this case by their subjects in place of their authors. Write the class number on the first line in the upper left-hand corner of each card, and the book number on the second line. If a call number is used for fiction, I would suggest leaving the first line blank, as that would immediately indicate that the book was fiction. I would strongly recommend also that all collective biography be classed in 920, instead of scattering it through classes 920-928.

For small libraries the book number could be dispensed with altogether without disadvantage, and books of non-fiction could be arranged on the shelves according to class and alphabetically by authors in each class. The accession number in this case would be a distinguishing mark, should one be needed.

Use red ink with its screaming emphasis for all subject headings and subject cross references, even names of individuals when these are treated as subject headings. Bring the author out to the left vertical line or outer indentation on all cards except the series card. On the series card bring out the series heading and indent to the second indentation all authors. Indent the first line of the title on all cards and all lines of the title on the title card. Begin all headings, subject, title, cross reference, etc., except the author heading, and the series heading, on the same card, at the second or inner indentation.

I have appended a list of the simpler, more available and less expensive tools for the cataloger, starting those that are likely to be most used; also a list of bibliographical and typographical terms most frequently used in library work.

A word concerning the materials used may not be amiss. Get the very best cards of medium weight in the market, for though the expense may be a trifle greater in the beginning, the saving in the end will more than compensate you in the appearance of the cards and the permanency of your work. The Library Bureau card, size 33R, is the best and has the advantage of being of the same thickness as the printed card of the Library of Congress, a very important fact, as it makes filing easier and the handling of the cards simpler. Cards of varying weight in a catalog do not make for ready consultation. Have the tops of the cards red-inked, as that will prevent them from looking soiled for a much longer time. Red-ink the printed cards yourself as you add them, either by passing a brush dipped in red ink over a package tightly compressed, or by running the red ink pen along the top of each card singly. Practice on some waste cards before beginning. If you find that your borrowers handle the cards at the sides very much, have the cards inked at the sides also. The Library Bureau will do this free of charge if you will specify it when ordering them.

Get the buff colored bristol board guide cards with celluloid tops, which may be ordered of the Library Bureau with the special lettering desired by you, or in standard sets of 300 or 500 guides respectively. That printed tip sticking out between the tops of your cards in the catalog trays looks much more inviting than a written guide, and the celluloid protects it thoroughly. If your public is in the habit of fingering the guide slips in the front of the catalog trays, slide a piece of celluloid over your written or printed slip in the little brass holder. These also may be procured of the Library Bureau.

Buy the best cabinet that may be found (with lock rods instead of screw rods) otherwise you will live to regret having been unwisely economical.

Use the best inks, or if your library can afford it, use the typewriter. A good typewriter, preferably the Underwood visible writing machine, with the best ribbons (Record, lightly inked), and first-class quality cards, will insure a degree of uniformity and neatness that will be a satisfaction alike to trustee, librarian and the public. If you use the Underwood, or any other typewriter, have it fitted with the élite type, as that most closely resembles the print on the Library of Congress card, is more quickly read and enables you to put more on a card than the larger type with which a typewriter is ordinarily supplied. The ratchet also should be so altered that one touch of the key will move the carriage and indent as for author and two taps as for title.

If you prefer to label your books, and you will have to label some which do not lend themselves readily to lettering, use the round linen label instead of a paper label. The shape prevents the corners from curling up and off and the spaces between the linen threads seems to keep it smooth on the back of the cover. It does not blister and crack as a paper label so often does. Before pasting on the label rub the spot (on the back of the book) with a little ammonia to take off the dressing. The label will stick better. For lettering use Higgins's waterproof black and red inks and David's white letterine, and Esterbrook's telegraphic pen, which has a turned up point and will therefore enable you to write while holding it in an almost horizontal as well as vertical position. Keep your pen clean. Before beginning to letter, shellac the back of the book the entire width and the height of the number, beginning all numbers at an even distance from the bottom of the book. After the shellac has dried, write in the Call number and allow this to dry before applying a second coat of shellac. Sometimes an unimportant marking of the binder or publisher will be found where it interferes with the Call number. In such case use a coat of Higgins's waterproof black drawing ink before applying the first coat of shellac, making sure the ink coating is thoroughly dry, or clean off the gilt on the binding with ammonia. Judgment and experience are needed in working with the various binding materials. There is also a certain knack in holding the pen while lettering. After the book has been used for some time the lettering tends to rub off—it cannot be avoided so far as I know. Lettering may at any time be removed by applying ammonia. If the shellac becomes thick and whitens dilute it with wood alcohol.

When sending books to the binder for rebinding, instruct him to print the call number on the back, in gilt or black, at the same time. The extra cost is almost nothing and the result much more permanent and satisfactory than labeling or lettering done by yourself. If you order your books from The Chivers Binding Company direct and can assign call number to the titles ordered in advance, have them added in the same way. You will find that binding and lettering both will last as long as the book itself.

Have stamps made for any heading or note in frequent use on catalog card or elsewhere; e.g., the name of your library (to be used when ordering printed cards, etc.) notes reading, "For contents see the main card," etc. etc.

Following is a useful sign to be framed and placed on top of the catalog case:

HOW TO USE THE CATALOG

This catalog may be consulted like a dictionary or a cyclopedia.

If you know the Author's name look for that.

If his name is not known to you, look for the Subject.

When the book is a work of fiction look under the first word of the Title not an article.

All Authorless works are to be found under the first word of the Title not an article, such as the, a or an.

REFERENCE AIDS FOR THE CATALOGER

1.

"As a rule, a cataloger can without difficulty determine the nationality, or the class, or the period of the person whose name he seeks. In deciding whether he will then look for the name in a general or a special book, experience must be his guide. For an author whose surname is familiar, while his forenames have slipped the memory, a general book will be of readiest service; and even for unknown names a good general book may be consulted before an inferior special help."

Never do over what has already been well done by someone else. Therefore,

If you have access to one of the catalogs of printed cards of the Library of Congress (a Depository Catalog, so called) consult that before any reference books and accept it as your authority, unless you have reason to question the authenticity or correctness of an entry.

In examining or consulting reference books, be careful to identify the author as the author of the book in hand. The maiden names of married women may often be found in the body of a notice when omitted from the heading. Observe and note the time, scope and countries covered in each reference book and the classes of people to be found therein, so as to prevent waste of time and effort in consulting it for names of people not covered by said time, scope, countries and classes.

In the following classified list the entries which are starred (*) indicate the books most used for reference purposes in the Cataloging Department of the Brooklyn Public Library. I have omitted stars for old catalogs of libraries, which are very helpful in cataloging old collections but not current publications. I have not attempted to give publisher or price, as you can readily ascertain that from your local dealer or the A. L. A. Publishing Board.

Advance Sheets or Copies. Copies of a book, unbound (sheets) or bound, printed in advance, to be used as a basis for preliminary notices, or for simultaneous publication at a place distant from the place of printing and binding.

Alcove. A recess or separate compartment for books in a library, formed usually by two bookcases projecting from the wall, making a very small room, which is sometimes fitted up for the purposes of study.

Alphabetic-Classed Catalog. An alphabetic subject catalog made by class entry, in which the classes are arranged alphabetically and the subdivisions of the classes are also arranged in alphabetic order. It may also include author and title entries in the same alphabet.

Alternative Title. The subtitle of a book introduced by the word "or" or its equivalent.

Ampersand. The abbreviation or sign or character for the word "and"; thus, & (Roman) & (Italic) & (black letter).

Analysis. The registry of part of a book or of a work contained in a collection.

Analytic Entry (or an Analytic). A separate entry (whether under author, subject or title) for a distinct part of a book. The body of the entry is followed by a reference in parentheses to the work of which it forms a part.

Annotation. The act of giving additional information in the form of notes, also the notes themselves when made.

Anonymous. Published without the author's name. A book is considered anonymous if the author's name does not appear in the book itself.

Antiqua. A German expression for Roman types.

Appendix. An addition appended to a document or book relating to the main work, usually consisting of explanatory or statistical matter adding to its value, but not essential to its completeness, and thus differing from a supplement, which properly is intended to supply deficiencies and correct inaccuracies.

Application Blank. A printed form furnished by a library to be filled out by persons applying for the use of its books. These forms are filed alphabetically in trays or boxes and serve as an index to the registration book.

Assumed Name, see Pseudonym.

Asyndetic. Without cross-references. See also Syndetic.

Author. 1. The writer of a book, as distinguished from translator, editor, etc.

2. In a broader sense, the maker of a book or the person or body immediately responsible for its existence. Thus, a person who collects and puts together the writings of several authors (compiler or editor) may be said to be the author of a collection. Corporate bodies may be considered the authors of publications issued in their name or by their authority.

Author Card. A card bearing an author entry; usually the main author card. (See also Main Entry.)

Author Catalog. An alphabetic catalog of author entries, and entries under editors, translators, etc. It also usually contains titles, but is then more properly called an author and title catalog.

Author Entry. An entry of a work in a catalog under its author's name as heading, whether this be a main or an added heading. The author heading may consist of a personal or a corporate name or some substitute for it; e.g., initials, pseudonyms, etc.

Author Number. A combination of letters and figures assigned to each book for the purpose of preserving on the shelves an alphabetic arrangement by author under each class. (See also Call Number.)

Author Table. A printed list used in assigning author numbers; for example, the Cutter author tables, or Cutter-Sanborn author tables.

Bastard Title, see Half-Title.

Bibliographee. One who is the subject of a bibliography.

Bibliography. The science which embraces the history and description of books, treats of their authors, subjects, typography, editions, materials, etc. Also used to mean a list of the books or authorities on any particular subject, as a bibliography of architecture or a list of books of a particular author, printer, place, or period.

Complete bibliography. A list of all books on an author or subject.

General bibliography (or Universal bibliography). Includes bibliographies whose object is to enumerate the titles of books of every age and country and on all subjects.

National bibliography. Record of books printed in a certain country.

Select bibliography. A list of the best books on an author or subject.

Special bibliography. Confined to books on some particular author or subject and may include all or a selection of the books on that subject or author.

Trade bibliography. Application of bibliography to the purchase of books.

Bibliopeggy. The art of binding books.

Binder's Title. The title lettered on the back of a book by the binder, as distinguished from the title on the publisher's original binding or cover. (See also Cover Title.)

Bindery Book. A book kept for the purpose of recording in it the titles of all books sent to the bindery.

Bindery Slip. A slip sent with each volume to the bindery, on which is given directions to the binder in regard to its lettering and style of binding.

Binding. The cover of a book after the volume has been folded and sewn.

1. Full Binding. A binding in which all the outside of the back and sides is of one piece of cloth or leather.

2. Half Binding. A binding in which the back and corners are covered with the leather or material mentioned, and the sides with paper or cloth.

3. Quarter Binding. A book which has leather or cloth on back only, not on corners.

4. Three Quarter Binding. A binding in which the back and corners are covered with the leather, or materials mentioned, of extra width.

Biographee. One who is the subject of a biography.

Black Letter. A name now given to the Gothic or Old English letter, which was introduced into England about the middle of the fourteenth century, and was the character generally used in manuscripts and in the first printed books. It is still, with various modifications, in common use in Germany.

Blind-Tooled. A book is blind-tooled when the tools are impressed upon the leather without gilding and the pattern is left of the natural color of the leather.

Boards. A book is said to be "in boards" when the boards are covered only with paper, in distinction from one whose boards are covered with leather or cloth.

Body of the Work. The text or subject matter is thus described to distinguish it from the preliminary appendix or notes.

Book Binding, see Binding.

Book Card. A card kept in each book, on which is written the call number and name of the book to which it belongs and which is taken out when the book is borrowed and kept as a record of the borrower and date.

- Book Label. A small label usually pasted on the back of a book on which is written its call number. Round linen ones are best.
- Book Number. A letter, number, or any combination of numbers, letters, or characters assigned to a book in order to distinguish it from all other books in the same class. (See also Call Number.)
- Book Plate. A label pasted in a book to mark its ownership and to indicate its location in a library.
- Book Pocket. A pocket pasted inside the cover of a book to hold the book card or the borrower's card.
- Book Support. A prop, made in various styles, which is placed upon a shelf to prevent books from falling over, thus preserving the binding and keeping order on the shelves.
- Book Tag, see Book Label.
- Borrower's Card. A card given after receipt of application blank to indicate the borrower's right to draw books. It usually has a number and the borrower's name and address.
- Borrower's Index. An alphabetic list of all borrowers, serving as an index to the registration book. (See also Application Blank.)
- Borrower's Register, see Registration Book.
- Bracket (verb). To enclose between [].
- Branch Library. A permanent collection of books, forming a small library, which, although belonging to the main library and reporting to it, is housed separately and circulates its books independently.
- Broadside. A sheet of paper printed on one side only.
- Calendered Paper. Paper very highly rolled or glazed, much used for printing illustrated books or magazines.
- Call Number. The number, or combination of numbers and letters, which indicates the location of the book on the shelves. In libraries using the relative location, the class number and book number together constitute the call number. (See also Author Number, Book Number, Class Number, Cutter Number.)
- Call Slip. A printed blank furnished by the library for the use of borrowers on which must be enumerated the authors, titles, and call numbers of the books wanted, or the call numbers only.
- Caption. The heading at the beginning of the text or of a chapter, section, page or article.
- Caption Title. The title taken from the caption.

Card Catalog. A catalog of books in a library in which each entry is made on a separate card. The cards are of the same size, and stand on edge in drawers, trays or boxes, and may be arranged either alphabetically or numerically.

Card Catalog Case or Card Case. A case of drawers or trays for the storage of the cards forming the card catalog.

Card Volume System. An arrangement for a card catalog whereby the cards or slips are held together by an adjustable binder in the form of a book instead of in drawers, as in the common form of the card catalog. Sometimes known as the Leyden form of card catalog.

Case. Two faces of shelving together, with front edges of the books facing in and the backs showing on each face.

Case Work. In bookbinding applied to that binding in which the case or cover is made separately; the sewed volume being then glued and fastened into the cover.

Cast Off. (To cast off copy), in printing, to compute the number of words in written copy in order to fill the space, or the number of pages, which the matter will fill when in type. A troublesome task in uneven or badly written MS.

Catalog or Catalogue (of books). A list of books, usually arranged according to some definite plan. As distinguished from a bibliography, it is a list of books in some library or collection. For specific kinds of catalogs see:

Accession Book	Dictionary Catalog
Alphabetic Subject Catalog	Name Catalog
Alphabetico-Classed Catalog	Personal Catalog
Author Catalog	Shelf List
Classed Catalog	Subject Catalog

Catalogue Raisonné. A catalog of books, paintings, or the like, classed according to their subjects, usually with more or less of comment or explanation.

Catchword Entry. Entry made from some word of the title other than the first word and not indicative of the subject, but likely to be remembered and used by borrowers in asking for a book.

Ceriph, see Serif.

Changed Title. When the same book is published under different title, or titles, or the original title is translated in various ways, such titles are spoken of as "Changed Titles." (See page 200, for examples and treatment.)

Charging Desk. The place where books are returned and received by borrowers.

Charging System (or Loan System). Method used in keeping an account of the loan of books.

Chart. A sheet showing facts graphically or in tabular form.

Children's Home Library. A collection of a certain number of carefully selected books and periodicals placed in the home of a child who acts as librarian and who chooses about ten children to form a group which meets once a week and is visited by some one who acts as a friend and adviser to the children. Designed to reach the class of children who are not reached by the free public library.

Circulating Library. A library from which the borrowers may take books for use at home or elsewhere under certain restrictions; distinguished from a library of reference.

Clarendon. A style of type made in any size, having a somewhat heavy and condensed face. The older fonts were called "Egyptian."

Class. A group of subjects having common characteristics or attributes.

Class Entry. Registering a book under the name of the class; in the subject catalog used in contradistinction to specific entry.

Class List, see Shelf List.

Class Number. A number, letter or combination of numbers, letters, or other characters, which stands for the subject of a book, and sometimes indicates the place of the book on the shelves. (See also Call Number.)

Classed Catalog. A catalog made by class entry, whether the classes so formed are arranged logically, as in the systematic kind, or alphabetically, as in the alphabetico classed.

Classification. 1. The act of grouping together in classes books which have the same subject or form.

2. The scheme on which the classes are divided.

Broad classification. Classifying books so that they are grouped by large classes rather than by minute subdivisions of the classes.

Close classification. Bringing together all the books on a given topic by subdividing classes as closely as possible.

Classify. To arrange or group together books which have the same subject; to assign numbers indicating the class of a book from a given scheme of classification.

Clerical Errors. Mistakes in copying MS.

Cliche. French term for a cast, usually applied to stereotype or electrotype plates.

Cole Size Card. A card devised by Mr. George Watson Cole for ascertaining the size of a book.

Collate. 1. To examine a book to see that all the pages, plates, etc., are there, and that they are in correct order. In book-binding the collating follows the gathering of the sheets.

2. To collect, compare and examine critically books and manuscripts.

3. To run through the sheets of a book to see if the signatures are in sequence.

Collation. A term used to cover that part of the description of a book which is not properly a part of the imprint; namely, volumes, pages, illustrations, maps, plates, portraits, etc.

Collection. A number of works or parts of works, considered as constituting a whole; e.g., a collection of monographs, a collection of essays, a collection of poems.

Collector. A compiler; one who gathers and puts together several works or parts of books, or scattered pieces in one book. Often called editor.

Colon Abbreviations. Abbreviations for the most common forenames made by using the initial, followed by a colon for men and .. for women, thus H: (Henry) J: (John) M.. (Mary), etc.

Colophon. An inscription or other emblematic device at the end of a book giving the title, writer's and printer's or publisher's name, and date and place of printing. Frequently one or more of these items is omitted; again there may be in addition the printer's or publisher's device.

Compiler. One who produces a literary work by collecting and putting together written or printed materials from various sources. (See also Editor.)

Compound Name. A name formed from two or more proper names, often connected by a hyphen, a conjunction, or a preposition.

Continuation. 1. A work published as a supplement to one previously issued.

2. A part issued in continuance of a serial or book.

Copy Numbers (or Copy Letter). A figure or letter added to the Call Number of a book to distinguish different copies of the same book from each other; e. g., 821C46; 821C46S; or, 821C46 (cop. 2).

Corporate Entry. Entry under the names of bodies or organizations (a government, department, congress, council, society, etc.) for works published in their name or by their authority.

Cover Title. The title printed on the original covers of a book or lettered on the publisher's binding, as distinguished from the title lettered on the back of a particular copy of the book by the binder. (See also Binder's Title.)

Cross Reference. Reference from one heading to another. (Corresponds to double entry in dictionary cataloging.) In a dictionary catalog, the references made back and forth between the subjects, to bind them together and give a complete view of the resources of the library on allied subjects, are called cross references. In a classed catalog, when a book treats of more than one subject or may be useful under more than one class, the reference made under any subject other than the main class is called cross reference. See also "See" Reference and "See Also" Reference.

Cut Edges. A book which has been cut on the three sides is said to have cut edges.

Cut-in-Notes. Side-notes which are inserted within the text at the side instead of in the margin, thereby displacing a part of the text.

Cutter Number. The number obtained from the Cutter or Cutter-Sanborn Author tables, and used with the initial letter of an author's surname to form the book number. (See also Call Number.)

Date. 1. Imprint date. The year of publication as specified on the title-page.

2. Copyright date. The date of copyright as given in the book, as a rule on the back of the title-page.

3. Preface date. The date given at the beginning or end of the preface.

4. Introduction date. The date given at the beginning or end of the introduction.

5. Dedication date. The date given at the beginning or end of the dedication.

6. Colophon date. The date given in the colophon.

Decimal Classification. A system for classifying books devised by Melvil Dewey, the distinguishing features of which are the grouping and numbering of the heads by the common arithmetical figures treated decimally.

Deckle. The raw or ragged edge of handmade paper is thus termed; it is equivalent to the more common designation, "rough-edged."

Dedication. An address to a patron or friend, prefixed to a book or other production, testifying respect, and often recommending the work to his special protection and favor.

Delivery Station. A place where borrowers of a public library may receive and return books without going to the main library. The books are collected and sent to the main library with the borrowers' orders for new books.

Departmental Library. 1. A type of library in which all the books are separated into distinct libraries, each of which covers a special field, contains all the books in the library on that subject, and has a separate room with a special library and catalog.

2. In university and college libraries applied to a collection of books kept in a department of the college not in the main library but under its control.

Depository. Various important libraries selected by the U. S. Government to receive, store, and keep for use the government publications are called "government depositories."

Depository Catalog. Complete author catalog of the Library of Congress on cards. 51 libraries in the U. S. are in receipt of depository catalogs.

Dewey Decimal Classification, see Decimal Classification.

Diagram. An illustrative figure giving only the mechanical plan, outline, or general scheme (not an exact representation) of the object.

Dictionary Catalog. That form of catalog in which the headings (author, title, subject, and form) are arranged alphabetically like the words in a dictionary; it is distinguished from other alphabetic catalogs by giving specific entry in all cases.

Documents, see Public Documents.

Double Entry Charging System. A system for charging books in which two records are kept at the library, one of the books, and one of the borrowers. The Boston Athenaeum is an example of this.

Double Entry (in Dictionary Cataloging). The entry of a book treating of more than one subject under each distinct subject.

Dummy. A board of the thickness of an ordinary book on which a label is pasted indicating the locality of a book kept elsewhere than in its regular place.

Dummy Copy. A copy generally made up of blank leaves to represent the actual bulk of a work not quite complete.

Duodecimo. In the United States, a book composed of sheets folded to form 12 leaves, each leaf measuring about $5\frac{1}{8}$ inches in width by $7\frac{2}{3}$ inches in height when the leaf is uncut, and corresponding to crown octavo of British publishers. This size in books is briefly indicated by 12mo or D or 12°.

Duplicate. A second copy of a book identical with the first in edition, contents, and imprint (binding and paper may differ).

Edition. 1. The whole number of copies of a work printed from the same set of types and issued at the same time.

2. The statement in the title or in the imprint of the issue to which any given copy of a book belongs, as distinguished by number, or some descriptive word, revised, enlarged, etc.; e.g., Ed. 4, Ed. rev., Ed. 2 enl., etc.

Editor. One who prepares for publication a work or collection of works not his own. The editorial labor may be limited to the preparation of the matter for the printer, or it may include supervision of the printing, revision (restitution), or elucidation of the text, and the addition of introductions, notes, and other critical matter. (See also Compiler.)

Elision Marks. Three dots, thus . . . used in exact cataloging, to indicate the omission of one or more words from the title.

End Papers. The blank leaves placed at the beginning or end of a book in binding. Also called fly-leaves or end leaves.

Entry. The record of a book in a catalog or list. See also Main entry, Title entry, Analytic entry, Series entry, Subject entry.

Entry Word. The first word of the heading under which the book is registered in the catalog.

Epitome. The abridgment of a work without material change in style or purpose. It retains the substance or principal matter of the original.

Expansive Classification. A system of classification devised by C. A. Cutter.

Face. The entire unbroken front of shelving on one side of a double case or on one side of a room or gallery.

Facsimile. An exact copy, or reproduction of an original in all its proportions, qualities, and peculiarities: as a facsimile of manuscript, of typography, of an autograph, etc. When a book contains facsimiles the fact is indicated in the collation by the abbreviation (facsim.).

Fascicle (Fascicule in French). A part of a book published in numbers.

Finding List. A condensed catalog of the books in a library, omitting descriptions of editions, and containing usually simply the author's name, brief title and call number.

First Word Entry. Entry made from the first word of a title not an article.

Fixed Location. The marking and placing of books on shelves where their location in the library is never altered.

Fly Title, see Half Title.

Fold Symbol. A symbol (a printer's mark) indicating the number of leaves into which a sheet is folded, and thereby approximately the size of the page.

Folio. 1. A sheet of paper folded in two leaves or four pages only.

2. A book or periodical composed of sheets folded but once having four pages to a sheet; hence, a book of the largest size.

Font. This term is applied to the whole number of letters constituting a complete set of types of any particular class of face or body.

Full Binding, see Binding.

General Cross Reference Card, see Cross Reference.

Government Documents, see Public Documents.

Guide Card. A projecting labeled card inserted in a card catalog to aid in finding a desired place or heading.

Half Binding, see Binding.

Half Title. 1. The title of a book printed usually without author's name or imprint, on the leaf preceding the main title page, usually a briefer form of the title; called also Bastard title.

2. A brief title placed on a separate leaf, dividing the sections of a work.

Head-Line. The line at the top of the page giving the title of the book, or the subject of the chapter or of the page.

Headband. 1. A decorative terminal cord or roll forming the end of the inner back of a book.

2. A decorative band at the head of a page or chapter in a printed book.

Heading. The word (or words) by which the alphabetic place of an entry in the catalog is determined, generally the name of the author, the subject, or the first word, not an article, of the title.

Heads. A term applied to the margins at the tops of the pages.
Home Library, see Children's Home Library.

Imprint. The place, publisher's name and date, ordinarily printed at the foot of the title-page. In a broader sense the term is used to include paging, size, etc.

Incunabula. Books printed before 1500.

Indent. To set a line in some little distance from the left edge or margin of a card or sheet of paper, as in the case of a fresh paragraph.

Independent. In cataloging, when two books are bound together as one volume, each having a distinct pagination and title-page, they are said to be independent, or independents.

Index. An alphabetical list of topics treated in a book or books, showing exactly where in the book or books the subject is to be found.

Indicator. A contrivance used in English libraries for displaying by means of numbers differently colored, or numbered spaces left blank, shown in a frame facing the public, the books which are not in circulation.

Inferior Figures and Letters. Those made to range at the bottom of letters, thus:—1 2 3 4 5 a e i o u.

Information Desk. A place set aside in a library where readers may find some one to assist them in their search for information.

Inter-Branch Loan System. An arrangement by which the borrower in a large branch system may obtain from his branch, within a specified time, the book wanted, no matter in which branch it is contained.

Inter-Library Loans. An arrangement made between libraries whereby one library may borrow from another library books which are difficult to obtain, or wanted for some special purpose by a responsible borrower.

Joint Author. A person who writes a book in collaboration with one or more associates, the portion written by each one not usually being specified.

Joint Author Card. In a card catalog, applied to the cards written for the second and following authors of a book written conjointly.

Label, see Book Label.

Large Paper Edition. An edition of a book printed on paper of extra size, allowing wide margins; the letter press is the same as in the small paper edition.

Leaded Matter. Types set up with leads (thin strips of type metal) between the lines, forming spaces; used in contradistinction to "solid" matter.

Ledger System. A system for charging books in which the records are kept in a book instead of on slips or cards.

Lending Library, see Circulating Library.

Letter Symbol for Size Notation. The designation of the size of a book by the letter of the size, founded on actual measurement (not on the fold) as agreed upon by the American Library Association.

Letterpress. Printed matter from type, as distinct from lithographic or plate printing.

Librarian. One who has charge of the books, contents and administration of a library.

Librarianship. The position and duties of a librarian.

Library. 1. A collection of books and other literary material kept for reading, study and consultation.

2. A place, building, room or rooms set apart for the keeping and use of a collection of books, etc.

Library Administration. The administration of a library is the force behind the machinery of its working routine. To oversee the work of a library in all its relations, to plan for and promote its usefulness, is the work of the library administrator, and it embraces the supervision and development of the work of all departments and the solution of their various problems; library administration must of necessity begin where library organization ends.

Library Economy. The practical application of library science to the founding, organizing and administration of libraries.

Library Organization. Library organization must of necessity precede library administration. Decision upon the methods and lines along which the library is to be run, and getting these methods into working order is the basis of library organization. Plans for and erection of the library building; executive decisions with regard to selection, appointment and duties of the staff, the planning and putting into practice a definite system upon which the work of the library is to be carried on—these are successive stages in library organization. Organization is the act or process of organizing; i.e. creating a systematic union of individuals in a body whose officials, agents and members work together for a common end. Administration is the act of administering such a union; i.e. directing an office, service, employment, etc. Organization creates the machine; Administration runs it.

Library Science. The science relating to the administration of libraries: library economy and bibliography.

List Price. The price of a book as quoted by the publisher in his catalog.

Loan Desk, see Charging Desk.

Loan System, see Charging System.

Lower Case Letters. The small letters as distinguished from capitals, as used here, a, b, c, d, etc.

Magazine, see Periodical.

Main Entry (or Main Card). The principal entry of a book in the catalog usually giving fuller title and imprint information than other entries and usually the author card. (See also Author Card.)

Main Entry Word. The first word on the principal catalog entry, usually the author's name.

Mercantile Library. A subscription library established for and managed by the mercantile class.

Movable Location. The position of books in a library when arranged by their subjects rather than by a fixed shelf number, the relative position of the classes remaining the same, while the actual location of the books in the library is movable.

Name Catalog. A catalog arranged alphabetically by names of persons and places, whether used as authors or subjects. A title catalog may be included in the same alphabet.

Name Reference, see Cross Reference.

Net Price. The list price less all discounts; a book is quoted "net" when it is subject to little or no discount to the trade.

Nom de Plume, see Pseudonym.

Notation. A system of signs (figures, letters, arbitrary characters, or any combination of these marks) used to designate the class and book number or shelf number of the volumes of a library, so as to assist in finding or replacing them accurately and quickly.

Octavo. A book composed of sheets folded to form 8 leaves, measuring about 6 inches in width by 9½ inches in height (medium 8vo) written briefly 8vo or O or 8°. There are several sizes of 8vo; demi 8vo, royal 8vo, imperial 8vo, etc.

Off-Set. A more or less distinct impression of type or pictures to the back of the next sheet delivered from the press made when the sheets are laid together before the ink is dry.

Omission Marks, see Elision Marks.

Open Shelf System. This system permits free access on the part of the public to any or all shelves in the library.

Order List. The record kept of books as they are ordered.

Organization, see Library Organization.

Out of Print. A book is out of print when the publisher has no more copies for sale.

Pagination. System of signs and numbers by which the consecutive pages of a book are marked, also the statement of them in the collation.

Paleography. The science and art of deciphering ancient manuscripts and documents, including the knowledge of the various characters used at different periods by the scribes of different nations and languages, their usual abbreviations, etc.

Pamphlet. A printed work consisting of a few sheets of paper stitched together but not bound; now in a restricted technical sense eight or more pages of printed matter (not exceeding five sheets) stitched or sewed, with or without a thin paper wrapper or cover.

Partial Title. An entry made for part of the title of a book, well-known under that part; i.e. Tom Sawyer, for book entitled Adventures of Tom Sawyer.

Pen-Name, see Pseudonym.

Periodical. A publication intended to appear in successive numbers or parts at more or less regular intervals and, as a rule, for an indefinite time; each part properly contains matter on a variety of topics, generally by several contributors. Memoirs, Proceedings, Journals, etc., of societies, are not considered regular periodicals.

Plan. The representation of anything drawn on a plane, as a map or chart, specifically, the representation of a building or other structure in horizontal section, as it stands or is intended to stand on the ground, showing its extent and the division and distribution of its area into apartments, rooms, passages, etc., or its method of construction and the relation of its parts.

Plate. A full page illustration usually printed on special (heavy) paper, one side of the leaf being blank. Plates are not as a rule included in the paging.

Polygraphic. Written by several authors.

Preface. A brief explanation or address (usually a personal statement or apology) to the reader at the beginning of a book or other publication, and separate from the body of the work; distinguished from an introduction.

Preliminary. Any matter coming before the text of a work, as title, preface, contents, etc.

Printer. The person who prints a book, as distinguished from the publisher and bookseller who issue and sell it.

Privately Printed. Books are said to be privately printed when they are issued from a private press, or for private distribution only, and are not (ordinarily) in the trade. For books privately printed the name of the printer or the press is to be followed by the abbreviation "priv. print." before the date in the imprint.

Proof. A trial impression from composed type, plates or blocks taken for correction.

Proprietary Library. A library that is owned on shares by a limited number of stockholders.

Pseudonym. A fictitious name assumed by a writer in order to conceal his identity.

Public Documents. The regular official publications of a government, containing reports, statistics, etc.

Public Library. One that is not restricted to the use of any class of persons in the community; open to all, but not necessarily free. Often used with the same meaning as Free public library.

Public School Library. A library which is under the control of a board of education and supported by money from the school funds.

Publisher. One who publishes; especially one who issues or causes to be issued from the press and offers for sale or circulation matter printed, engraved, or the like. See also Printer.

Publisher's Price, see List Price.

Pulls. A term often applied to proofs.

Quarter Binding, see Binding.

Quarto. A book composed of sheets folded to form four leaves, about 7 by 8½ or 10 by 13 inches, according to present usage, the name being understood to denote a shape approaching the square; written briefly 4to or Q or 4°.

Quire. Twenty-four sheets. Books in sheets, that is, not bound, are said to be in quires.

Quotes. A printer's term for turned commas (") and apostrophes ('), placed respectively at the beginning and end of quoted matter.

Reader's Card, see Borrower's Card.

Reading-List. A list of the best books and articles on a subject, giving suggestion for reading and study designed to help the special student.

Reading-Room. A room set aside for reading and study, usually provided with the current newspapers and periodicals.

Ream. Twenty quires. A printer's ream is 516 sheets; hand-made and drawing papers sometimes 472, 480 or 500 sheets.

Recto. The page to the right hand when the book is open, always the uneven number.

Reference. An entry made under one heading to direct attention to another heading is called a reference.

Reference Book. 1. Reference book proper, such as a dictionary or an encyclopedia, intended to be consulted for definite points of information (rather than read through) and arranged with explicit reference to ease in finding specific facts.

2. Books not allowed to circulate, but kept for reference only.

Reference Card, see Cross Reference.

Reference Library. A library where the books may not be taken from the building, but are for consultation only.

Reference List. A list of the books and articles on some subject referring to all the available reading matter on it in the library, usually subdivided by topics so as to make it more useful.

Reference Work. That branch of the library's administration which includes the assistance given to readers in their search for information on various subjects.

Registration. The act of recording in a register the names of the borrowers of the library.

Registration Book or Borrower's Register. A list of all borrowers of a library kept in the order of their application by numbers which are assigned also to its readers' cards.

Relative Location, see Movable Location.

Reprint. 1. A reproduction of an earlier edition of a work, without alteration; a new title-page may be added or substituted, or the original title-page may be used, with or without the addition or substitution of the date of the reprint; reproductions in facsimile, whether printed from type or otherwise, are called facsimile reprints.

2. A "separate," i.e. an article from a serial publication or collection, separately issued, whether printed from the forms or plates of the original or from type reset.

Rubricated. Printed in red ink.

Rudolph Continuous Indexer. A cabinet for storing the entries of a catalog for the use of the public, in which the entries are inserted in a series of leaves of press board which revolve around a pair of hexagonal drums. The Newberry Library has a Rudolph indexer.

Running Title. A title or headline repeated at the head of succeeding pages, throughout a book or chapter.

Sale Duplicates. The extra copies of volumes which a library does not need and wishes to dispose of by sale or exchange.

School District Library. A library administered by school officials and made free of access to the people of the community.

Secondary Fullness. The fullness with which, in very full cataloging, an author is given on all secondary cards; i.e. all cards except the main card; e.g. The name is written out in full if the author has but one Christian or forename. Initials of the forename only are given if there is more than one. In case of married women one forename and the maiden name constitute secondary fullness and may be written out.

Section, see Signature.

"See" Reference. In a dictionary catalog, when referring from a heading under which no entries are to be made (for instance, a reference from an abandoned subject heading, or from a pseudonym to an author's real name or vice versa), the word "see" alone is used. Such a reference is called a "see" reference.

"See Also" Reference. In a dictionary catalog, when a reference is made connecting two headings, both in use (for instance, from one subject heading to another or other allied headings), the words "see also" are used. Such a reference is called a "see also" reference.

Separate. An article from a serial publication or a collection, separately issued, whether printed from the forms or plates of the original or from type reset.

Serial. A publication issued in successive parts, usually at regular intervals, and as a rule, intended to be continued indefinitely. Serials include periodicals, annuals (reports, year-books, etc.), and memoirs, proceedings and transactions of societies.

Serial Number. The number denoting the place of the publication in a series, as Third annual report.

Series. 1. A number of volumes, usually related to one another in subject or otherwise, issued successively by a publisher, as a rule in uniform type, with a collective title which generally appears at the head of the title-page, on the half-title, or on the cover.

2. Each of two or more volumes of essays, lectures, articles or other writings, similar in character and issued in sequence, e.g. Lowell's Among my books, second series.

3. Several successive volumes of a periodical or other serial publication numbered separately in order to distinguish them from preceding or following volumes of the same publication; e.g. Notes and queries, 1st series, 2d series, etc.

Series Entry. A brief entry of the several works in the library which belongs to a series under the name of that series as heading.

Series Note. The name of a series enclosed in parenthesis placed on the catalog card after the imprint and collation.

Serif. The fine cross line on the top and bottom of a letter, as in H. Sans-serif thus: H

Set Off, see Off-set.

Shelf List. A brief record of the books in a library with the entries arranged as the books stand on the shelves. The shelf list thus arranged forms a condensed subject catalog, but is used chiefly in taking the inventory of a library at stated intervals. Sometimes termed Class list.

Shelf List Card. An index sized card on which is given the call number, author, title, date and number of volumes and accession numbers of all copies of a book. Arranged in class order like books on the shelves.

Shelf List Sheets or Shelf Sheets. The sheets on which the shelf list is sometimes made.

Shoulder Notes. Marginal notes placed at the upper inner corner of the page.

Signature. 1. One of the folded, printed sheets which forms part of a book. Also called section.

2. The figure or letter or other distinguishing mark placed by the printer at the bottom of the first page of each section, to indicate its order to the binder; also used by printers to identify any particular sheet.

Single Entry Charging System. A system for charging books in which but one record is kept at the library, that of the books. The Brooklyn Public Library and Newark Free Public Library are examples of this.

Size (of book). The size of a book is measured by its height; but in addition to that measurement it is called "narrow" if the width of the cover is less than $\frac{2}{3}$ of the height; "square" if more than $\frac{3}{4}$; and "oblong" if the width of the cover is greater than the height. The Cole size card or a centimeter rule is used for ascertaining the size of a book.

Size Card, see Cole Size Card.

Size Copy. A thickness or dummy copy (q.v.)

Size Letters. A series of abbreviations, chiefly single letters, to indicate the sizes of books, adopted for the use of the A. L. A. in 1878.

Size Notation. The designation of the size of a book by means of the number of the fold, the letter of the size, or by actual measurement.

- Size Rule. A metric rule on which are stamped the size letters and the corresponding fold symbols.
- Slips. Applied to matter not made up into pages, but pulled as proofs in long slips.
- Small Capitals. The smaller capitals (as distinct from the full capitals) thus: A, B, C, etc. Indicated in MS. by two strokes (==) underneath.
- Sobriquet. A fanciful descriptive or humorous appellation; a nickname.
- Specific Cross-Reference. Reference to a specific book in the catalog.
- Specific Entry. Registry of a book under a heading which expresses its special subject as distinguished from entering it in a class which includes that subject.
- Stack. A series of double-faced bookcases grouped in one room, usually placed as close together as possible to allow of compact storage of books. The stack may be one or more stories high, as, a "five-storied stack."
- Standing. Type not distributed after printing is said to be "standing."
- State Library. A library supported by a State and located at the Capital of a State chiefly for the use of its executive, legislative and judicial departments.
- Stereotypes. Casts of pages of types, etc., in metal, either by "plaster" or "paper" process.
- Sub-Title. A secondary or subordinate or additional title of a book, usually explanatory.
- Subhead. A secondary heading used to subdivide the entries under a subject heading, e.g. France. Manners and customs.
- Subject. The theme or themes of a book.
- Subject Catalog. A catalog of subjects, whether arranged in classes or alphabeted by names of subjects.
- Subject-Entry. Registry of a book under the name selected by the cataloger to indicate the subject.
- Subject Fullness, see Secondary Fullness.
- Subject-Heading. A heading under which are entered all the books relating to a subject.
- Subject Reference, see Cross Reference.
- Subject-Word Entry. Entry made under a word of the title which indicates the subject of the book.
- Subscription Library. A library that is open to any one on payment of a fee.
- Superior Letters and Figures. Small letters cast at the top of the shoulder of type, used for references or abbreviations, thus ²mor. ³cf.

Swash Letters. Seventeenth century italic capitals with tails and flourishes.

Systematic Catalog. A subject catalog made by class-entry in which the classes are arranged in logical order according to some system of classification.

Syndetic. Applied to that kind of dictionary catalog which connects its entries by means of cross reference so as to form a whole.

Table-Tail. The bottom or lower edge of a book. The term is applied both to the paper of the text and to the cover of the book.

Three-Quarter Binding, see Binding.

Tier. A row of shelves placed one above another between two uprights and reaching from the floor to the top of shelving

Time Numbers. A series of book numbers designed to preserve the arrangement of books on the shelves in chronologic order in contradistinction to the author or alphabetic order.

Title. In the broad sense, the distinguishing name of any written production, as given on the title-page, including the name of the author, editor, translator, the edition, etc., but excluding the imprint. In the narrow sense, the title does not include the name of the author, editor, etc. See also Alternative Title, Binder's Title, Caption Title, Cover-Title, Half-Title, Running-Title, Sub-Title.

Title-Entry. The record of a book in the catalog under some word of the title, generally the first word not an article. A title entry may be a main entry or an added entry.

Title-Page. The page at the front of a book or printed work, which contains its full title and usually gives author's name, publisher, place and date of publication.

Tracing. In a card catalog, the method of indicating on the main card the secondary entries made for any book. Tracing is done in two ways, by means of underlining on the face of the card, or by means of notes on the back. The latter is preferable.

Transliteration. The representation of the letters or approximate sounds of a language having a peculiar alphabet by the alphabetical characters of another. Before Russian or Greek names can be arranged in an English catalog, they must be expressed in Roman characters.

Traveling Library. A collection of a certain number of books, usually 50 or 100, which may be lent for a limited period to responsible borrowers on payment of a nominal fee to cover expenses of transportation, etc.

Turned Commas, see Quotes.

Two-Book System. A system by which a library permits two books to be drawn at a time or on different days if the reader wishes, usually with the provision that only one book may be a novel.

Typography. 1. The art of composing types and printing from them. 2. The execution of printed matter, its general appearance and arrangement.

Uncut. A book is uncut when it has untrimmed edges. If the edges have been opened with a paper knife without trimming the margin, it is said to be opened, but is uncut.

Uncut Edges. Books not cut down, but not necessarily unopened.

Unopened Edges. Applied to books the edges of which have not been opened.

Vernacular. The language or mother tongue of a given country. Names given in the vernacular are given in the form customary in the native country of the person.

Verso. The obverse or back of a leaf, the reverse of "recto." The page to the left hand when the book is open, always the even number.

Volume. 1. A book distinguished from other parts of the same work by having its own title-page and usually independent paging.

2. Whatever is bound in one cover.

Wrong Font. Letters of a different character or series mixed with another font.
